High Court Sets Hearing On Petitions Of 7 Japs

Arguments Slated Dec. 16 to Decide Whether to Review War Crimes Cases

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court yesterday agreed to decide if it has power to step in and review the action of an Allied war crimes tribunal.

By a 5 to 4 vote, the court scheduled oral arguments December 16 to determine its power to review conviction of seven Japanese leaders, who question legality of the Far East Military Tribunal which sentenced them to penalties ranging from 20 years' imprisonment to hanging.

Jackson Breaks Tie

The tie-breaking vote to consider the Japanese petitions was cast by Justice Robert H. Jackson, formerly chief prosecutor at the Nuernberg war crimes trials, who explained his vote in a soul-searching six-page memorandum.

Justice Jackson previously has disqualified himself from war crimes appeals before the high court. These, involving sentences by the United States military courts, not international tribunals, have previously resulted in 4-to-4 votes, which uphold conviction.

To assume jurisdiction over international preceedings, declared Justice Jackson, is "bound to embarrass the United States." But to let convictions of the Japanese stand through a tie vote, he said, would be "a stain whether deserved or not . . . impressed upon the record of the United States in oriental memory for all time to come."

Other Actions

In other major actions, the high court:

1. Refused to direct Alabama's presidential electors to cast their 11 votes for President Truman, instead of States Rights Candidate Gov. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina. Alabama's Gov. James E. Folsom and three others unsuccessfully sought such an order.

2. Finally upheld constitutionality of the Portal-to-Portal Act as a whole, by refusing to review lower court decisions. Previously, the Supreme Court had upheld, in effect, major portions of the act.

3. In a 5-to-4 decision, ruled that the Fair Labor Standards Act does apply to the Bermuda Islands base leased by the United States for 99 years in the destroyers-for-bases swap of 1941.

Executions Are Stayed

The seven Japanese, whose American attorneys asked the court for permission to file writs of habeas corpus for them, included Gen. Kenji Doihara, 64, nicknamed the "Bird of Evil Omen" for his undercover work in China, and former Premier Koki Hirota, 70, both sentenced to death.

Others are Koichi Kodo, former adviser to the Emperor; Admiral Takasumi Oka, Gen. Kenryo Sato, and Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, all sentenced to life imprisonment, and former Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo, sentenced to 20 years.

All are in a group of 25 sentenced at the same time, and any high court action may affect the group. In addition to Dolhara and Hirota, five others were sentenced to hang and did not appeal, in-

'Blue Baby' Boy Held 'Inoperable'

Claude Sine, 13-year-old "blue baby" farm boy of Mountain Falls, Va., was pronounced "inoperable" yesterday at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. The pronouncement also means early death for the boy, it was said.

At the same time William Perry Stewart, 22, of Silver Spring, a University of Maryland student, underwent the first of a series of examinations at the same hospital to determine if the Blalock-Taussig operation could correct a somewhat similar congential heart malformation. Russia Fears Dishpan Hands Await Soviet Wives Abroad

By Dudley Ann Harmon

Paris, Dec. 6 (U.P.)—Russia fears its women may get dishpan hands if they are permitted to leave the Soviet Union with foreign husbands, the United Nations was told today.

Alexei Pavlov, Soviet delegate, told the U. N. Legal Committee that it would not let Russian women leave the country with foreigners they have married because they would become kitchen slaves and might even, like one victim, have to pawn their jewelry.

Opposing a Chilean resolution condemning Russia for clamping down the Iron Curtain to keep its women home, Pavlov cited a long list of complaints which, he said, were made by disillusioned Russian women who had gone abroad as brides. Most of the complaints he read have been published in Moscow newspapers.

"It has become clear that not only I cook dinner for my husband but that I should know exactly when he steps in the house, for at that moment warm plates must be put on the table," he quoted one Mrs. Thomas Clark as complaining.

Another wife said she had to pawn "jewels brought from Moscow when her husband lost his job." This woman said her husband promised her that life in Great Britain would be "materially secure and culturally pleasant."

"Culture should not be mentioned," she said. "In 2½ years in London I was not able to attend a theater."

The woman added that she felt justified in divorcing her husband and taking her son to Russia, where he never would know the unemployment and misery his father faced.

Pavlov said that 16 American states forbid marriage between white and Chinese. Louisiana and Oklahoma, he said, forbid marriage between Indians and Negroes and Maryland refuses to let whites marry Malayans or Negroes. Georgia, he aid, forbids marriage between whites and Asiatics and Negroes. This, he said showed there was no freedom of marriage in the United States.

If British husbands want to live with their Russian wiyes, let them go to Russia, Pavlov said, because the women do not want to leave home after hearing of terrible conditions in Britain.

Mason Would Double City Liquor Taxes

Commissioner Says He Will Not Seek Higher Levy on Beer

Commissioner Guy Mason said last night he will seek legislation to double liquor taxes and license fees of Washington liquor dealers to help boost District revenue.

He said that he would not recommend changing levies on beer because "after all, that's a poor man's drink." As for upping taxes on wines, including champagne, he said he would give this a little more thought.

Citing the District's dim financial picture, especially the plight of D. C. government employes who missed out on the Federal pay raise in Congress last June, Mason pointed out that his plan would "make it just that much easier to make both ends meet."

Would Double Revenue

Doubling the city tax on distilled spirits alone, Mason estimated, would swell the city revenue by two million dollars, bringing the total from this source to four millions.

Revenues from liquor license fees on dealers in distilled spirits during the fiscal year 1948 amounted to $790,000, including beer.

The District Government also received $79,000 from the liquor industry as a congressional-directed contribution to the city's alcoholic clinic.

Mason said his proposal to secure more funds from this "luxury item" would in no way replace the Commissioners' continued drive for enactment of a District sales tax.

"Washington has now won for itself the reputation of being one of the wettest spots in the United States and it's not good," Mason declared. "Certainly increased levies would be reflected in retail prices, but let it be. It is a luxury; let the people pay for it."

He doubted, however, that heavier levies would decrease liquor sales within the District since the local tax is "much cheaper" than in nearby jurisdictions, even in areas where liquor is sold through State stores.

Nearby Rates Cited

Mason said he will advocate increasing the present gallonage tax on distilled spirits from 50 cents to a minimum of $1 per gallon. In Maryland the tax is $1.20 per gallon where it is sold both privately and through State stores by local option of the individual counties. All distilled spirits are sold through State stores in Virginia and West Virginia.

Mason pointed out that during periods of short supply many out-of-state persons purchased liquor

ABC Refuses Mitchell's Grill New Hearing

Policeman's Testimony Hit by Attorney in Liquor License Case

By Charles E. Davis, jr.
Post Reporter

The testimony of a policeman was put under fire yesterday but the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board refused to grant Mitchell's Grill, 235 G st. nw., a new hearing on its recent license suspension.

F. Joseph Donohue, attorney for the grill, made a strong attack on the credibility of Police Pvt. Samuel E. Wallace, whose testimony as a vice squad undercover man resulted in the grill being found guilty of 41 of 57 alleged liquor law violations.

"His testimony is incredible and his evidence not worthy of belief," asserted Donohue.

Clashes Mark Hearing

Consideration of the defense motion for a new hearing was marked by several sharp clashes between Donohue and Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert D. Wise.

First, Wise objected to Donohue calling witnesses as contrary to a precedent set by the Court of Appeals but he was overruled by the three members of the ABC Board.

Donahue said he asked for the new hearing after reading newspaper accounts of a press conference called by Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett, a conference held several hours after the ABC had ruled in the case and at which Wallace was questioned by Barrett.

At the conference, according to newspaper stories, Wallace admitted he made a "mistake" when he testified during the hearing that Barrett had instructed him to "avoid mudslinging."

Reporters Are Called

Yesterday, Donohue called as witnesses Barrett, Wallace and four newspaper reporters, Joseph Crown of the Evening Star, William T. Mosley of the Times-Herald, John T. Burch of the Washington Daily News and Alfred E. Lewis of The Washington Post. The reporters all appeared under subpena.

Wise called Lieut. Roy Blick and Sergt. Albert B. Nicholson of the vice squad as witnesses.

[During the original ABC hearing, Wallace's testimony was challenged by a fellow policeman, Pvt. Frank M. Mathos, First Precinct plain-clothes man, who said Wallace had bragged to him he was "sandbagging" the grill. Wallace returned to the stand six dayes later and denied saying this.]

When Barrett was called to the

Only Man She Identifies

Widow of Lynching Victim Takes Warrant Against One

Lyons, Ga., Dec. 6 (U.P.)—Mrs. Amy Mallard came here under police protection today and swore out a murder warrant against a young white farmer who, she said, was one of a mob which lynched her husband November 20.

The 40-year-old widow of Robert Mallard said William L. (Spud) Howell, 24, was the only member of the mob she could "positively identify."

No incidents developed when the Negro schoolteacher came here from Savannah, where she has been hiding in fear of her life. She returned with State police guards, ordered by Gov. Herman Talmadge, to Savannah.

Howell and two other white men, Roderick L. Clifton, 32, and James W. (Buck) Spivey, 27, were in jail. They surrendered after gossip linked them with the lynching so they could be "cleared," they said. All insist they are innocent.

A special grand jury meets Friday to take up the slaying of the 37-year-old funeral supplies salesman, a prosperous Negro who lived among poor white farmers. He was shot to death.

Justice of the Peace Ernest L. Morgan, who signed the warrant, pointed out that "murder" is a loose charge in Georgia, covering a wide variety of homicides.

In the event it is brought out to the grand jury's satisfaction that mob violence was involved, all participating would be held equally guilty, the magistrate said.

James C. James, brother of the widow and a Buffalo, N. Y., attorney, came here with her. James issued a statement that they had been treated with kindness during their visit.

Chinese Reds Claim Three Armies in Net

But Nanking Says Forces Are Barring Foes' Regrouping In Shantung Lairs

Nanking, China, Dec. 6 (U.P.). Three government army groups which last week evacuated Suchow have been trapped in the Honan-Kiangsu provincial border area, about 30 miles southwest of Suchow, the Chinese Communist radio claimed today.

A government spokesman admitted that the Suchow forces have swung northwest from the Suchow-Nanking railroad, but he said they formed a line between Yungcheng and Hsiayi to keep the "battered Communists from escaping to their old lairs" in Shantung and eastern Honan provinces for regrouping. Yungcheng is 50 and Hsiayi 25 miles southeast of Suchow.

The Communist radio said that the government army groups totaling some 200,000 men "face annihilation unless they surrender."

Trap West of Suchow

The army groups, identified as Gen. Chiu Ching-chuan's Second Gen. Li Mi's Thirteenth and Gen. Sun Yuan-liang's Sixteenth, were said to be trapped between Communists along the Suchow-Nanking line some 20 miles to their east, and by vast Red armies on the Yellow River plains northwest and west of Yungcheng.

Earlier, the semi-official Central News Agency claimed that these army groups were fighting their way southward along the railroad and hoped to join other Nationalist forces at Tuhsien, 48 miles south of Suchow.

Only this morning, Central placed the Nationalists within 10 miles of Suhsien, about 40 miles from where they were.

Nationalists Claim Kuchen

The Central Daily News, newspaper organ of the government, gave this version of the Suchow battle:

1. The Nationalists who were guarding Pengpu, 105 miles northwest of Nanking, and who checked the Communist drive along the Suchow-Nanking railway at the banks of the Huai River last Thursday, pushed northward to capture Kuchen, 30 miles north of Pengpu.

2. The three Nationalist army groups driving southward along the railway reached a point just north of Suhsien to trap the Communists between Kuchen and Suhsien. When the Communists tried to escape to the northwest, the Nationalists swerved to the

Commissioning Of New Cruiser Set January 29

Newport News, Va., Dec. 6 (AP).—The 17,000-ton heavy cruiser Newport News will be commissioned by the Navy in ceremonies here January 29. Mayor R. Cowles Taylor said Saturday he has been informed of the commissioning plans by the Navy.

The cruiser was built by the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co. and was launched here in March, 1947. It is now being outfitted at the Norfolk naval shipyard in Portsmouth.

The Navy has termed the new ship and her two sister ships, the Des Moines and the Salem, the heaviest heavy cruisers in the world.

Election a Socialist Triumph

Fear of Police Makes 2000 Flee Jobs in Red Berlin Zone

Berlin, Dec. 6 (AP).—Two thousand employes in the main office of Berlin's electric power company refused today to report for work any longer in the Soviet sector. They said Communist police spied on them and molested them.

The workers employed by Bewag, a German company, reached their decision during the afternoon at the close of business. A spokesman said they will report to the company's branch offices in western Berlin Tuesday morning instead of showing up in the Russian sector.

Meanwhile the smashing municipal election triumph of the bitterly anti-Russian Social Democratic Party intensified the East-West struggle over Berlin.

Completed now was the political division of this city 100 miles behind the Iron Curtain.

[Communist Party leaders, however, were making hasty plans to hold a rival election in the Soviet sector in an effort to give an aura of popular backing to the Russian-sponsored rump government in power there, the New York Herald Tribune correspondent reported.—Editor's note.]

Blockaded Berlin wondered what the Russians might do next to counter the rebuff they received at the polls yesterday. In defiance of Communist threats, the Germans of western Berlin turned out a near record vote of 86.2 per cent of the electorate. The act of voting itself was a protest against Soviet occupation policies.

From the Russian point of view, the voters added insult to injury by giving a majority to the Social Democrats, a militantly anti-Communist organization. The other two parties which participated, the Christian Democrats and the Liberal Democrats, also are anti-Communist.

The final results:

Social Democrats (Socialist)—858,100 (64.5 per cent).

Christian Democrats (conservative)—258,496 (19.4 per cent).

Liberal Democrats (conservative)—214,224 (16.1 per cent).

The Social Democrats showed a gain of 13 per cent from the first postwar election of 1946. It possibly was the greatest victory the party has scored in its 80-year history.

Ernst Reuther, Social Democratic leader and former Communist, will become mayor of the new municipal government. He was barred from office by the Russians last year. He will govern only the two-thirds of Berlin occupied by the Americans, British and French. In the Soviet sector, where the election was banned, a Communist puppet government rules.

The Social Democratic victory may increase pressure for an economic as well as a political split between eastern and western Berlin. Party leaders long have urged

33 Survivors Of Lost C-54 Picked Up

Carrier Rendova Radios Rescue of Men Aboard Plane Downed in Pacific

BULLETIN

Honolulu, Dec. 6 (AP).—The aircraft carrier Rendova radioed tonight it has picked up 33 survivors of a ditched C-54 transport plane which went down in the Pacific yesterday with 37 men aboard.

Johnston Island, Dec. 6 (AP). A Navy plane searching the Pacific for 37 men off a ditched C-54 Air Force transport radioed it had sighted two rafts with about 30 survivors in daylight today.

The plane, a Privateer, gave the position as 465 miles southwest of Johnston. It came across the survivors at approximately 3 p. m., Johnston time (9 p. m. EST), the radio message advised.

The position is just about where survivors were sighted when a B-17 dropped a rescue boat last night. Air searchers also told of seeing flares and blinking lights in the darkness. But when dawn came, there was not sign of the survivors, and the hunt was resumed.

(The Hawaiian Sea Frontier said the aircraft carrier Rendova, Navy Patrol Craft 1141, and the Cargo ship Zelima were speeding to the spot southwest of Johnston Island. Tiny Johnston, from which the search has been directed, is 715 miles southwest of Honolulu.)

The C-54 went down early Sunday. It was enroute from Okinawa to Spokane, Wash., with four other Skymasters ferrying Ninety-eighth Bomb Group ground personnel. The others reached Johnston and joined in the vast search.

A Catalina search plane located the rescue boat dropped by the B-17 last night. It was empty and had drifted 70 miles. The Catalina continued to search the area.

The lost plane's automatic radio signal was heard for eight minutes after it was ditched at sea. This led to hopes that the 30 passengers and 7 crew members had a good chance to escape in the adequate life rafts the plane carried.

The plane's passenger list as released today by the Spokane Air Force Base, follows:

Ex-State Dept. Official Issues Prompt Denial Of Accusation

BULLETIN

New York, Dec. 6 (U.P.)—Two members of the House Un-American Activities Committee questioned former Communist Whittaker Chambers for two hours tonight behind the closed doors of a Manhattan hotel.

Representatives Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), and John McDowell (R., Pa.) would not comment on what line the questioning took.

"We have accomplished our mission," Nixon said. "My party and I are taking the next train to Washington so we can attend the committee hearings tomorrow. We are well satisfied. That's all I have to say."

Chambers also was noncommittal.

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Sworn charges that Alger Hiss, former State Department official, removed secret information from Government files for delivery to Russian agents yesterday were released by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Hiss promptly denied the charges "without qualification."

Hiss was named in a deposition by former Communist Whittaker Chambers during a Baltimore pretrial hearing of the $75,000 slander suit brought by Hiss against Chambers.

The charges were incorporated into the record of the House committee yesterday. Excerpts from the deposition were read to reporters by Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), member of a subcommittee investigating "new developments" in the long-dormant Hiss-Chambers case.

Documents Never Delivered

Chambers, now a senior editor with Time magazine, told in the deposition of introducing Hiss in 1937 to a "Colonel Bykov," identified by the committee as a NKVD (Russian secret police) official.

"Following that meeting Alger Hiss began a fairly consistent flow of such material as we have before us here," Chambers said in the pretrial statement.

In New York, Hiss said in a statement:

"I am advised that the Committee on Un-American Activities has released to the press certain portions of testimony given by Mr. Chambers in depositions taken in my libel action against him in Baltimore.

"I deny without qualification the accusations made in that testimony.

"Inasmuch as this matter is now before the grand jury, I do not feel it appropriate to comment further at this time."

Nixon told newsmen Chambers referred to 65 "restricted" documents introduced in the Baltimore hearing and not to the cans of microfilm unearthed early Friday in a small pumpkin on Chambers' Maryland farm. He charged three of the documents were in Hiss' handwriting.

Nixon said these documents were never delivered to Bykov by Chambers, who renounced communism in late 1937, but that the former Red courier admitted relaying earlier information to the Russians.

Chambers' testimony in the slander case was released as both Chambers and Hiss were called before a Federal grand jury for questioning about the microfilm copies of State Department documents found in the pumpkin on Chambers' farm.

Subcommittee Goes to N. Y.

A House Un-American Activities Subcommittee meanwhile sped to New York to take testimony "from certain witnesses" on the microfilm development. The subcommittee will return to Washington for closed hearings starting at 2 p. m. today. The subcommittee had planned to question Chambers at that time but Nixon indicated that his presence would be required at least another day by the grand jury.

Hiss, who sued Chambers for slander after the self-labeled former Red publicly accused Hiss of membership in the Communist Party, vigorously denied Chambers' former allegations as well. He charged Chambers was lying.

Hiss, now president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, was assistant to Assistant

Austria Asks Big 4 to Renew Treaty Talks

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

The Austrian government appealed to the four major powers yesterday to resume their stalemated negotiations for an Austrian treaty.

A note asking for a new start was delivered at the State Department by Dr. Ludwig Kleinwaechter, the Austrian Minister here. Identical notes were delivered to Great Britain, France and the Soviet Union.

The appeal from Vienna opened the way for the first attempt in many months to settle a long-disputed issue with the Russians by direct negotiations.

Since the end of last summer's Danube Conference at Belgrade, where the Western powers failed to win freedom of navigation on the river, and since the end of direct talks on the Berlin blockade last September, there have been no negotiations with the Russians on pending problems except through public debates in the United Nations.

The Austrian talks were suspended in London on May 20, largely because the Russians at that time persisted in backing Yugoslavia's claim for the annexation of Austrian territory.

Nobody here knows whether the Russians are ready to abandon this claim if they can get economic

Transport Men Rout Leftists, Reelect Quill

Right Wing Names 10 Top Officers, 25 To Executive Board

Chicago, Dec. 6 (AP).—Michael J. Quill, bold-speaking head of CIO Transport Workers' Union, appeared tonight to have ousted left-wing adherents from the union by a convention victory of his personally indorsed slate.

Quill, president since the union was organized in 1936, was reelected over Austin Hogan, 473 votes to 186. Both are from New York City.

The anti-left-wing ticket also elected a secretary-treasurer and eight international vice presidents. The international officers were elected by standing vote over the objection of a minority which protested loudly for a roll call. Only two international vice presidents had opposition, but the losing candidates got no votes.

After Quill was elected he announced:

"We are tired of answering the foul statements of the New York Daily Worker. They have had their answer here tonight."

After the balloting, the delegates and observers broke out in a tumultuous demonstration of approval.

Quill gave a brief speech of acceptance. He said:

"It has been a hard fight for six months in which the Communists have used all the money they had to defeat me. You will

It's 'a Mess' Right Now

Furnishings Are Carted Away As White House Repairs Begin

The driveway of the White House was jammed with big moving vans yesterday. They were carting away furniture, portraits, china and books.

Mrs. Harry S. Truman, who had walked over from Blair House to collect some personal belongings, took one look at the scene and remarked:

"This is a mess, isn't it?"

In the historic East Room, scaffolding had been erected to support the ceiling. The fact that the plaster had started to sag was one of the reasons the architects decided to start overhauling the mansion, a job that will continue until the latter part of 1949.

Meanwhile, President Truman and his family will live in Blair House, across the street on Pennsylvania ave.

The job of moving furniture and other objects from the White House got under way Saturday. However, preparations for the moving began well before this.

Chandeliers and mirrors were taken down, the damask was removed from the Red, Blue and Green rooms, and the gold-painted piano in the East Room was swathed in heavy quilts.

The Lincoln bed and the other pieces of furniture, together with the portraits and china, are to be stored in the National Gallery of Art.

The White House books will be cared for in the Library of Congress.

A few pieces of furniture will be moved to Blair House.

PEOPLE In The NEWS

By Sam Stavisky

Dr. Reuter, New Lord Mayor of Berlin, Symbolic of Democratic Courage in City

There are no heroics in the makeup of Ernst Reuter, the onetime Communist who has become a symbol of the courageous democratic spirit in Russian-blockaded Berlin. Reuter, slated to be lord mayor of the western-occupied two-thirds of Berlin as a result of yesterday's election, is neither a rabble-rouser nor a flag waver.

Himself, twice imprisoned in a Nazi concentration camp, Reuter once said:

"I do not think it is of great use to discuss whether the people who tasted life in one of Hitler's concentration camps were heroes or not. I think they were only people who did what decent people did in every country at all times; they did not deny their convictions. . . ."

The heavy-set, deep-eyed champion of democracy was never one to deny his convictions. Severely wounded in the World War I and taken prisoner by the Russians, socialistic, idealistic Ernst—then in his twenties—became a convert of communism. He returned to Berlin after the war and for three years was a leader among the German Communists.

In 1921, Dr. Reuter broke off from the Reds, disillusioned by the domination of Moscow, dismayed by the Communist terrorism at home. He returned to the Social Democratic Party, a Socialist group devoted to democratic liberties.

Son of a middle-class northwestern German family, a scholar with degrees from three universities, Reuter was an intellectual in a party made up chiefly of the laboring class. But he was no more theoretician. He was a practical politician who practiced what he preached in terms of good government.

First elected to the Berlin city council in 1921, Reuter became an expert on traffic; ran the metropolitan capital's transportation system for many years. Recognized as an outstanding municipal administrator, Reuter was called to Magedeburg in 1931 to be lord mayor.

Two years later, when Hitler rose to power, the outspoken mayor was clapped into Lichtenburg concentration camp. He was released after some six months internment, and returned to Magedeburg to receive a spontaneous ovation from the populace. Within a few weeks, the Oberbuergermeister was again imprisoned by the Nazis. An English Quaker woman managed to obtain his release in 1934, and he escaped to England with his family.

Kemel Ataturk, the Turkish dictator, then seeking specialists to help him modernize his country, offered Reuter a post as economic adviser. Reuter accepted, and remained in Turkey for 10 years. A linguist who could already speak English, French, and Russian, Reuter quickly mastered the difficult Turkish tongue, and lectured on public administration — in Turkish—at Ankara University.

The indomitable fighter for freedom—according to a fellow exile now living here—never wavered in his certainty that Hitler would be overthrown, and democracy restored to Germany.

The German Embassy sought to quiet the implacable Reuter. They offered him a German passport which would permit him freedom of movement in the world—a priceless gift for a stateless refugee. Reuter refused the bargain. Both he and his wife were determined to return to Germany when the opportunity came, and to live there, come what may.

Reuter returned to Germany in 1945. He was first elected lord mayor of Berlin last year, but was vetoed by the Russians.

Dr. Reuter, despite all his tribulations, maintained an amazing sense of balance. Part of each day he devoted to his beloved studies of the Latin and Greek classics, his chief source of relaxation.

Recently the 59-year-old democratic leader wrote a friend here that he and his wife daily thanked God for the privilege of living once more in Germany, no matter how trying conditions might be. Reuter also wrote that he'd like to visit the United States again some day—as he once had during prewar days—and once more behold the beauty of the Grand Canyon.

'Civic Courage'

U. S. Praises West Berlin's Heavy Voting

The State Department went to unusual lengths yesterday to applaud Sunday's huge turnout of voters in the western sectors of Berlin.

In a statement later broadcast to Germany and neighboring countries, the department said:

"The Berlin population has in recent months demonstrated a type of civic courage which won for it the admiration of the democratic peoples of the world.

"The whole-hearted participation of an overwhelming majority of the population of the western sectors of Berlin in fair and free municipal elections yesterday was a further demonstration of the same civic courage.

"The conduct of the people of Berlin is an encouragement to all those devoted to the maintenance of civil liberties and democratic processes."

Officials here were impressed not only by the size of the vote but by the absence of Communist-inspired disorders. The tone of the Soviet-controlled press in the week before election day had suggested there would be outright attempts at intimidation at the polls.

the outlawing of the Russian mark in the western sectors.

Allied officials said the events of the last week have dimmed the prospects for settling the whole East-West argument over Berlin.

How the power workers' walkout will affect the power situation in the Soviet sector is a matter of conjecture. Bewag has five power stations supplying Berlin. Two provide power for the Soviet sector. The three stations in the western portion of the city have been forced to ration current because of the Russian blockade of the city.

The employes said their action is "not a strike" because they will carry out their duties, but only in the west and not under surveillance.

Bewag's office workers have quarreled with both the police and the Communist rump government in eastern Berlin. The police, suspecting the workers were trying to take office records to the west, have been pestering them for the past two weeks.

Some employes who merely were carrying out orders to exchange inventories between the main office and the subdivision were arrested, the workers complained.

They issued an ultimatum giving the police until 3 p. m. today to quit the main office. When the strong police watch was maintained, the decision to boycott the place was taken.

The workers said the Communists tried to force them to acknowledge the "election" last week of Friedrich Ebert as mayor of the rump government. The workers refused. In retaliation, they said, the police tried to oust the Bewag works council which represents the employes in company affairs.

In all 1,367,976 Germans voted in the American, British and French sectors of the city. There were 37,156 spoiled ballots, leaving a total of 1,330,820 valid votes.

The Communists had urged Berliners either to avoid the election or spoil the ballots as a form of protest. Election officials said the number of invalid ballots was "not unusual."

Women Outnumber Men in Berlin Vote

Berlin, Dec. 6 (AP).—In this land where woman's place traditionally is in the home, women accounted for about 65 per cent of the total vote in yesterday's whopping ballot demonstration of Berliners against communism. They cast about 400,000 more votes than the men Sunday.

Women outnumber men throughout Germany now because the war took a heavy toll of the men folk. In Berlin, women eligible to vote outnumbered the men 982,989 to 603,101.

More than 90 per cent of the women turned out to vote. only slightly more than 80 per cent of the eligible men voted.

Greek Report By Truman Less Bright

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday was forced to tone down his earlier optimistic view of the fighting in Greece.

In a report to Congress, the fifth of its kind since the Truman Doctrine went into effect, he said that "a military statement" has developed in the fighting between the American-backed Greek Army and the Communist-backed Greek guerillas.

This stalemate, he said, has "prolonged the struggle."

In his fourth report, prepared by the State Department and sent to Congress last October, Mr. Truman was most optimistic. He said then:

"American military aid, in material and technical advice, has enabled Greece to survive the immediate, critical threat to its independence. Although internal security has not yet been fully restored, the Greek forces have been provided the means of carrying the guerilla campaign to a successful conclusion, and the outlook for the early reduction of this problem to police proportions is promising."

Yesterday Mr. Truman told Congress frankly that this promising outlook "has unfortunately not materialized."

"Although the Greek Army won a series of victories over the guerillas during the spring and summer," he said, "the Army was deprived of final victory when the bulk of the guerilla forces which had been defeated in the Grammos Mountains operations escaped into Albania.

"Shortly thereafter many of these same forces returned into Greece, and the failure of the Greek army to make a determined effort to liquidate the guerillas rallying in the nearby Vitsi area had, by the end of the period under review, permitted the establishment of an increasingly strong concentration there.

"For Greece, which has known continuous strife and chaos for eight years, this was a bitter disappointment. Many older Greek soldiers had anticipated returning to their families and civilian life. The opportunity for bringing the guerilla menace under control this year was lost and much hard fighting lay ahead. Greek morale suffered a severe blow. . . ."

The report estimated the strength of the Greek forces, land, sea and air, at 168,500. It estimated the strength of the guerillas at 22,000—an increase over the figure given in the last report.

"The Greek guerillas," the President told Congress, "have continued and intensified their efforts to spread ruin and demoralization in an attempt to prepare the way for ultimate Communist domination of Greece.

"The strength of this attempt cannot be measured in terms of the number of active guerillas alone, but must take into account the volume of assistance which international communism continues to provide from Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia to sustain the guerilla movement."

The report said that American aid commitments to the Greek armed forces have reached $239,754,826, with $170,273,499 worth of arms and supplies already delivered.

German Mind Not Changed, Luckman Says

Charles Luckman, president of Lever Bros., Inc., is convinced that the present generation in Germany has "no shame, no remorse, no regret except that Hitler lost the war."

After seven weeks in Europe, during which he visited some of the 54 German plants affiliated with his company, he believes nothing can be done to alter the thinking of most Germans except to "inculcate fear" through a long Allied ocupation.

Luckman was in Washington yesterday to receive the decoration of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor from French Ambassador Henri Bonnet, in recognition of his work as chairman of the Citizens' Food Committee appointed by President Truman last year.

"I told General Clay that we were making a great error in trying to change the thought-processes of the present German generation," Luckman told a reporter. "Instead, we ought to spend hundreds of millions on the German children. We have proved again and again in this country that you can take children out of a bad environment and make good citizens out of them.

"We must permit the Germans to carry out some reasonable rebuilding of their industry, because there has to be a German economy. I'm strongly sympathetic to the view that there must be less dismantling of German plants for reparations.

"But there must be strict control. In order to contain the thinking of the present generation, I think we should have a long-term occupation and iron-clad supervision."

Luckman thought it was "nonsense" to say that Germans would not work hard for foreign-controlled companies. He said that in the 54 factories in western Germany "productivity has been increasing rapidly in direct proportion to the flow of raw materials into the plants."

He visited Hamburg, Stuttgart, Frankfort and Berlin, talking to factory workers as well as managers, and saw the Allied airlift at first hand.

"Sunday's election in Berlin wouldn't have gone the way it did if it had not been for the airlift," he said. "The Germans respect only one thing—power. The airlift was proof of our power, and of our spirit and determination.

"The greatest mistake the Russians made was their blockade of Berlin. It was the first time since the occupation began that we demonstrated we would and could stay in Berlin. It has had an extremely sobering effect on the Germans. Until then many Germans had thought we would run at the first sign of trouble."

Luckman said he was deeply impressed by the contrast between the "hopelessness and despair" he last saw in Europe in the fall of 1946, and the "hope and determination" he saw on this visit.

"Of course, there has been a great deal of physical reconstruction," he said, talking of England, Holland, France, and Italy, "but I consider the mental reconstruction more important. You can see evidence of the Marshall Plan at work in every city and every country.

"It is a tragedy of our time that the American people know so little of the great work that is being done with their Marshall Plan money."

Charles Luckman, former chairman of President Truman's Citizens' Food Committee, yesterday received the medal of a Chevalier of the French Legion of Honor from Ambassador Henri Bonnet in a brief ceremony at the Ambassador's residence.

Luckman, whose committee headed last year's food conservation campaign to aid Europe, was described in Bonnet's presentation remarks as "The moving spirit implementing the generosity of the President and working out the most touching impulse of the American people themselves."

Luckman, who toured Europe, and particularly France and Italy, this fall to study the effects of the food conservation program, told the Ambassador he had seen the "enormous strides" made by France in the past year, not only in physical reconstruction, "but, more important, in mental reconstruction."

The president of Lever Brothers also said the food campaign was a "great opportunity for a businessman to be of service" and described the honor he was receiving as "another evidence of the great response our people always have made to the call of humanity."

Guests at the presentation and reception held by Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet after the ceremony included Mrs. Luckman, former Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold and Mrs. Arnold; former Undersecretary of the Interior Abe Fortas and Mrs. Fortas, Paul A. Porter, former OPA administrator and Mrs. Porter; James M. Barnes, administrative assistant to President Roosevelt and a former Illinois Congressman and Mrs. Barnes; Eugene Meyer and Philip L. Graham, chairman of the board and publisher, respectively, of The Washington Post, with Mrs. Meyer and Mrs. Graham.

Members of the embassy staff present included Minister-Counselor Armand Berard and Mme. Berard, Counselor Arnaud Wapler and Mme. Wapler and other attaches.

Italy Drugged, Yugoslavs Say

Belgrade, Dec. 6 (NYHT).—The government of Premier Alcide de Gasperi in Italy, in obedience to the United States and Britain, is using the theater to drug the Italian people with "mysticism," the Yugoslav's Writers' Union said here today.

De Gasperi's American and British masters ordered him to make full use of the stage to steep Italy "in imaginary and unreal worlds to separate the masses from the burning problem with which they are now faced," according to the Yugoslavs.

Austria Asks Treaty Talks

concessions in return. The Cominform's bitter dispute with Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia leads some officials to think the Russians might be less insistent now.

In any case, the State Department is willing to try again, even without waiting for the end of the Berlin blockade, and the other Western powers are believed here to be equally willing. The Soviet attitude remains in doubt.

As chairman of the deputies who failed to agree on the Austrian treaty in London, Samuel Reber, deputy director of the State Department's Office of European Affairs, is empowered to ask for renewal of the talks at any time. The Soviet response to the Austrian appeal may show whether a renewal would be worth while.

Agreement on an Austrian treaty would not only remove the burden of a four-power occupation from Austria, but would remove the last legal excuse for the Russians to keep troops in Hungary and Romania. The peace treaties with the latter countries let the Russians keep troops there to guard communications to Vienna.

Americans in China Ask U. S. Intentions

Shanghai, China, Dec. 6 (U.P.)—An estimated 2500 Americans here are becoming increasingly concerned over lack of assurances from Washington that they will be protected if and when the Chinese Communists enter Shanghai.

United States Consul-General John Cabot discussed the situation today at a closed meeting of the American Association, to which most Americans belong. No statement was issued, but it was understood leaders of the American community pressed for a clear-cut statement of Washington's intentions.

Cabot was unable to give specific assurances, but he said Washington was considering the matter, reliable sources said.

Emergency Steps Taken

Meanwhile, the consulate and the Navy made preparations for "emergency protection" of United States nationals, informants said. It was understood the plan envisages concentrating Americans at various points near the waterfront, where shore parties of Marines and sailors will take them aboard United States warships anchored in the Whangpoo River.

The majority of Americans said they were dissatisfied with the present vague plans. For example, personnel at the American-owned Shanghai Light & Power Co., on which nearly the entire Shanghai area depends for electricity, were understood to have requested a Marine guard at the plant. The consulate and Navy said this was impossible under present orders from Washington, informants said.

Randall Gould, publisher of the American-owned Shanghai Evening Post-Mercury, said the situation needed immediate clarification from Washington.

American Interests at Stake

"Americans in China unanimously desire to conserve American interests here, but believe it will be imposible to remain unless Washington clarifies its presently ambiguous attitude toward the apparently imminent Red regime," Gould said.

"Does Washington contemplate diplomatic and trade relations or nonrecognition and embargo? If it is the former, most American business interests in Shanghai desire to hang on. If it is the latter, the majority are determined to catch the last evacuation ship."

Rear Admiral George C. Crawford was scheduled to arrive in Shanghai tomorrow following conferences on evacuation with American officials at Nanking.

U. S. Suggests Both Powers Leave Korea

Paris, Dec. 6 (U.P.)—The United States proposed today that American and Russian occupation forces leave Korea "as early as practicable" and under the observation of a special United Nations Commission.

A resolution submitted to the 58-nation Political Committee also called on the U. N. to recognize the American-sponsored South Korean government as the "only" government of Korea.

This would reject Russian claims that the Communist government set up in Soviet-occupied North Korea represents the Korean people.

The committee took a slap at the Russian-backed government by voting, 34 to 6, against inviting its representatives to come to Paris to testify—a process that would take several weeks.

Instead, the committee voted, 39 to 6, with Iran abstaining, to hear representatives of the South Korean government, which was set up after the May 10 election under the observation of a U. N. commission. The Russians refused to allow the commission into North Korea.

The United States resolution asked that the U. N. set up a new commission to go to Korea immediately. It would help unify the Soviet and American occupation areas, try to remove the economic barriers between the zones and observe further developments toward representative government.

It would instruct the commission specifically to:

"Observe the actual withdrawal of the occupying forces and certify the fact of withdrawal when such has occurred and, for this purpose, if it so desires, request the assistance of military experts of the two occupying powers."

The resolution does not necessarily mean the United States plans a speedy withdrawal from South Korea. American spokesmen have made it plain that the occupation forces would remain as long as the North Korean "people's army" theatens to seize all Korea.

Russia has announced it is withdrawing its forces from North Korea. But it has not permitted neutral observers into its zone to confirm withdrawals.

Russia's Jacob Malik opened debate in the Political Committee by accusing the United States of running a "police state" in South Korea. Urging the committee to hear representatives of the North Korean Communist regime, he said: "You must hear representatives of the Korean people to do justice not only to Korea but to all Asia. The people of all Asia are on the march."

3. These Nationalists captured four towns in the Yungcheng area, killing more than 1000 Communists and capturing 90.

Meanwhile, bitter battles were reported raging at Kalgan in north China and at Hwaiyin, on the Grand Canal east of Lake Hungtze and 110 miles northeast of Nanking.

At Kalgan, one-time Communist "capital" of North China, Nationalist Gen. Fu Tso-yi's forces were reported driving back Communist attacks from the north and the west. Kalgan, a great wall pass to Manchuria, is 100 miles northwest of Peiping. It had changed hands several times since the Japanese war.

Unconfirmed reports said that the Communists captured Hwaiyin yesterday and were ousted last night when government reinforcements arrived. The city controls canal traffic from east-central China to the Yangtze River at Nanking.

Twenty-five persons were killed when a Chinese air force transport evacuating Chinese army dependents from Nanking crashed into a hill near Keelung, Formosa, Chinese press reports said today. The only reported survivor was a small boy.

Deaf Mute Thumbs Ride and Accident Restores Faculties

Brazil, Ind., Dec. 6 (AP).—A hitchhiker who said he had been deaf and mute for six months today recovered his speech and hearing in a traffic accident.

The man had been picked up by Dean Schroyer, Dayton, Ohio, at St. Louis. The Schroyer automobile and another motor car sideswiped on U. S. highway 40 west of here.

The stranger leaped from the wrecked automobile and exclaimed:

"My God, I can talk."

Police and principals in the accident were so excited over the hitchhiker's story they failed to get his name.

Defense Talks Will Resume

The State Department announced last night it would resume Atlantic defense talks later this week with representatives of Britain, France, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg and Canada.

The conversations are scheduled to lay the groundwork for a formal alliance binding the United States and Canada with the key western European democracies.

Ambassadors of the five European countries met today at the French Embassy to chart a common approach for the [illegible].

If all goes according to plan, a full-fledged conference will result from these talks.

Responsible officials have indicated the negotiators are thinking in terms of a 55-year pact pledging each nation to assist the other in the event of outside attack.

U. N. Body Approves Rights Declaration

Paris (Tuesday), Dec. 7 (U.P.).—The United Nations Social Committee, ending more than two years of debate, approved early today the declaration of human rights which Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt helped write.

The declaration for the first time sets down on paper the rights which it says every man and woman in the world should have. It is not binding, but it is regarded as a beacon on the road to better government.

The vote was 29 to 0, with 7 abstentions. Twenty-two nations were absent during the vote.

The declaration was written by the human rights subcommission, approved by the Social Committee here, article by article, and then approved as a whole. It goes now to the U. N. General Assembly.

The final vote came after 4½ hours of wrangling over technical matters. Canada, the Soviet Union and the Soviet satellites abstained.

The United States voted for the declaration, which defines the rights of everyone "regardless of race, religion and sex." Mrs. Roosevelt cast the vote.

The declaration, which had to reconcile the conflicting views of Russians, Americans, Catholics, Protestants, Mohammedans and Hindus, sets forth that everyone is guaranteed:

1. The right to life, liberty and security.
2. The right to a fair trial.
3. The right to privacy and freedom from interference in his home or in his correspondence.
4. The right to freedom of movement and to leave any country.
5. The right to equal pay for equal work.
6. Equal rights in marriage and divorce.
7. The right to own property.
8. The right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion, opinion and expression.
9. The right to freedom of peaceful assembly.
10. The right to social security, adequate standard of living, education, rest, leisure and periodic holidays with pay.

Altogether, the declaration contains a preamble and 29 articles. Russia, over Catholic opposition, contributed the idea of equality in divorce. Russia also caused to be dropped a Brazilian proposal that the declaration mention "God, the Creator of Man," arguing that this was not the Soviet conception of God.

The committee also included a Uruguayan proposal which said no one could be compelled to join an association. The West had argued this tended to outlaw the closed shop.

The declaration declares that children of unwed parents shall enjoy the same social protection as accorded "legitimate" children.

Speakers Warn of Red Threat

Americans today face a choice between "private ownership of property and freedom, or State ownership and slavery."

This was told more than 1000 persons last night by Richard Mahar, Washington attorney, at the anti-Communist "town hall" meeting sponsored by the Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus.

"This is a fight where all Catholics, Protestants and Jews alike should be united, joined as one," Mahar said at Gonzaga auditorium, 27 I st. nw.

The right to property, he said, is a God-given right "set forth in the greatest code of laws ever written . . . the Ten Commandments—the seventh: Thou shalt not steal, and the tenth: Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's goods."

Another speaker, Dr. James J. Hayden, dean of Columbus University Law School, when asked from the floor if private property is threatened here today, replied:

"Not today, not tomorrow, perhaps, but there is always a danger in a country made up of so many polyglot peoples."

Such "slight shadows of private property" as do exist in Soviet Russia today were characterized as "a kind of economic strip tease" by Dr. Vladimir Gsovski, chief of the foreign law section of the Library of Congress and professor in the foreign service school at Georgetown University.

"The sham private property allowed Soviet citizens is deprived of any security or independence," said Gsovski, a former White Russian army captain and former member of the judiciary in Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia.

Chambers Swears Hiss Gave Secrets

Secretary Francis B. Sayre during the 1937 period covered by Chambers' latest statement.

Nixon released these excerpts from Chambers' deposition:

"Sometime in 1937, about the middle of the year, J. Peters introduced me to a Russian who identified himself under the pseudonym of 'Peter.' . . . The Russian, Peter, was one Colonel Bykov. . . . Colonel Bykov was extremely interested in the Washington apparatus. . . . In August or the early fall of 1937 I arranged a meeting between Alger Hiss and Colonel Bykov. For that purpose Mr. Hiss came to New York, where I met him. . . Colonel Bykov . . . raised the question of procuring documents from the State Department and Mr. Hiss agreed."

"What?" interposed William L. Marbury, Hiss' attorney, at this point in the Baltimore hearing.

"Mr. Hiss agreed," Chambers repeated. "Following that meeting Alger Hiss began a fairly consistent flow of such material as we have before us here.

"The method was for him to bring home documents in his briefcase which Mrs. Hiss usually typed. . . . There occasionally came to Mr. Hiss' knowledge certain things he saw in certain papers which he was not able to bring out of the department for one reason or another, either because they merely passed through his hands so quickly or because he thought it inadvisable but notations in his handwriting are notes of such documents—such information which he made and brought out in that form."

Nixon said three of the 65 documents produced by Chambers in the Baltimore pre-trial "are in Mr. Hiss' handwriting."

Documents Not Signed

"The documents are not signed by Mr. Hiss," Nixon added, "but the committee has just completed an appraisal by a handwriting expert in the Government. He said conclusively and without qualification that they are in the handwriting of Mr. Hiss."

Nixon said he had read the documents carefully and "it is apparent that they were obviously not intended just to be part of the State Department record."

He termed them "restricted documents . . . important documents . . . They contained in some instances military information . . .

"All I can say is they were State Department documents and summaries of State Department documents. As for what is in the documents you will have to wait until the committee meets in executive session—until it has sat in appraisal."

A reporter asked if any of the documents will be made public after the committee meets.

"Frankly I will never vote to let this information out," Nixon replied.

The California Republican said that himself, Robert E. Stripling, chief investigator for the committee, and Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.) discussed the nature of the documents and the microfilm at a meeting yesterday and agreed to disclose nothing "which in the judgment of responsible officials and the committee will impair the national interest."

"We can and will make public information without regard to the embarassment of any individual but we will release no information that might be embarrassing to the American people," he said.

Justice Department Criticized

Then he accused the Justice Department of an "apparent lack of interest in trying to get at the real crux of the matter."

"The Justice Department has almost frantically been attempting to find a method of placing the blame for having these documents in his possession on Mr. Chambers" he said. "That is not debatable. Mr. Chambers admits having the documents in his possession and is prepared to accept the consequences if any.

"The real issue which concerns the committee and should concern the Justice Department is determining who in the State Department furnished this information to Mr. Chambers. This committee is devoting its entire investigation to establishing who that person or persons were . . .

"There has been considerable interest in what charges Mr. Chambers has made concerning the sources of the material that he has turned over. In that connection, since Mr. Chambers' testimony has already been taken under oath, and under strict cross-examination by Hiss' lawyer, it is time now that the public be apprised of Mr. Chambers' allegations in that regard. . . .

"Mr. Chambers has now confessed to anything he's guilty of. He's made his bed and he'll have to lie in it. The important thing now is, who in the State Department was responsible?"

Elaborating on the deposition, only part of which was read to reporters, Nixon described Chambers as an "intermidiary." He said: "The documents were delivered to Chambers and Chambers delivered them to Bykov."

But he stressed that the documents produced at the pretrial hearing were never actually turned over to Bykov.

"He did turn over earlier documents but he did not turn these over," he said.

But Representative John E. Rankin (D., Miss.), ranking Democratic member of the committe, issued a statement saying "there can be no question" that some of the microfilmed information was given to a Russian agent "and probably to the agents of other foreign powers."

Rankin added that "one former high official," who he did not identify, said the information contained in some of the documents "undoubtedly contributed to the Stalin-Hitler pact, and it is entirely probable that they contributed to the Pearl Harbor attack."

Two State Department officials, Sam Boykin, director of the office of controls, and Donald Nicholson, chief of the security division, meanwhile conferred with Stripling and Nicholson on the microfilmed information unearthed at Chambers' farm.

"We asked to come," said Boykin, before entering the committee room. "We were not asked by the committee."

Hiss and Chambers Testify

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Whittaker Chambers and Alger Hiss—cetral figures of the congressional spy hunt—testified today before a special grand jury probing subversive activities.

Accuser and accused in a long controversy over alleged prewar Communist spying, they appeared before the same grand jury which has handed up indictments against 12 top Communist party leaders.

Neither Chambers, a senior editor of Time magazine, nor Hiss, onetime State Department official, would disclose the nature of their testimony.

But another witness, William A. Wheeler, brought with him copies of secret documents discovered last Thursday in a pumpkin on Chambers' farm in Westminster, Md.

Wheeler is investigator for the House Un-American Activities Committee.

That committee calls these documents shocking and definite proof that a Red spy network operated in the State Department before the war.

Wheeler said Chambers personally had pointed out microfilmed copies of the documents in a hollowed-out pumpkin on his farm.

Asked why Chambers had not previously disclosed the microfilm, Wheeler replied:

"He's a Quaker and didn't want to hurt anybody."

Chambers told newsmen he would appear again tomorrow before the grand jury.

Meanwhile, steps were being taken late today to assemble a new special grand jury to continue the work of the present one, if necessary, when its term expires December 15.

Senior Federal Judge John C. Knox authorized a jury clerk to call 100 prospective jurors on December 16. Twenty-three of these persons might be selected to make up a new grand jury.

The present jury will have completed an 18-month term on the fifteenth.

The jury, last July 20, returned indictments against 12 top Communists, charging them with conspiring to advocate violent overthrow of the United States Government.

Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.) and John R. McDowell (R., Pa.) said they would go into immediate executive session at a hotel to talk to "two persons." They were here to try to find out who gave State Department information to Chambers.. They did not identify the persons to be questioned.

Representative Nixon said "we're here to get information that we must get tonight."

Nixon parried newsmen's questions as to his mission here by saying "now, all this involves national security, boys."

Later, at the hotel, he said he thought the subcommittee's executive session would last about an hour. He said there might be a statement after it was over.

The congressional party was met at the Pennsylvania station by United States Attorney John F. X. McGohey, who has been representing the Government

U. N. to Reconvene In U. S. on April 1

Paris, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—The United Nations General Assembly voted 43 to 13, with two abstentions, today to adjourn Saturday night and meet again in New York on April 1 to clean up its unfinished business.

The vote, on a United States proposal, came after five hours of self-criticism in which the delegates ridiculed themselves and each other for failing to complete their work in 3½ months.

About one third of the items on the Assembly's agenda have not been touched.

Called "Half-Baked"

Delegate after delegate strode to the rostrum in the great theater of the Palais de Chaillot to describe this session as "half-baked . . . talkie talkie . . . disgrace . . . claptrap . . . too much talk and too little action."

Russia's Andrei Y. Vishinsky joined in the general self-vilification, saying, "there is some kind of perpetual motion here . . . This is an impossible way of working."

It is estimated the New York session will cost $356,000 and last five weeks. Britain's Minister of State Hector McNeil angrily predicted the session would last much longer when the delegates find themselves in the shining light of American newspaper publicity.

The vote ignored the steering committee's recommendation to begin the second part of this session in New York February 1.

Opposed by Britain

Britain, anxious to dispose of Italy's former colonies, fought bitterly to keep this session going until Christmas, if necessary, to complete its work. Russia wanted to let all items hang over until the next regular session in September.

Poland wanted to adjourn Saturday and forget unfinished business.

The United States originally suggested February 1, but the April date was offered in an Argentine amendment.

The last minute switch to April 1 took many of the delegates by surprise. Even the United States had no chance to point out that the first day for the second half of this session is "April Fool's Day."

Britain's Hector McNeil, who has fought desperately for days to keep this Assembly in session, blasted delegates who wanted to move to New York and spend scarce American dollars.

John Foster Dulles of the United States ridiculed Vishinsky's proposal for shortening the agenda by eliminating items.

"Mr. Vishinsky's proposal is simple," Dulles said. "He would eliminate all items to which the Soviet Union objects."

Hill Quits Resources Board

By the United Press

President Truman yesterday accepted the resignation of Arthur M. Hill as chairman of the National Security Resources Board, apparently as the aftermath of a dispute over the board's war planning powers.

A brief White House announcement said Hill had resigned, effective December 15 to return to his job as an executive with the Greyhound Bus Co.

High Government sources said Hill recommended the resouces board should be a sort of peacetime war production board with authority to tell various Government agencies what they must do in order to be geared fully for a war emergency.

The board's stated job is to keep tab on the Nation's natural resources and manufacturing facilities with an eye to a possible war emergency. It is not an operating agency.

Under Hill's proposal, it was said, the board would have been able to go a long step further and tell the Labor Department, for instance, what kind of a manpower program it should develop in case of national emergency.

The board, which last met September 9, was unable to agree on Hill's program. Hill has served as chairman of the board since it was organized in 1947.

Guard Chiefs Want Recruiting Change

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

National Guard chiefs are demanding that the Department of the Army concede that universal Military Training has little chance of passage now and revamp its fundamental policies for buliding adequate reserve forces on a "realistic" basis.

They are supported in their insistence on a revision of postwar military policy by Reserve chiefs. Both influential groups want to see troops strengths and other plans for the Guard and Organized Reserves scaled down to what is practical under a voluntary system of recruiting in the civilian components.

As leaders voiced these sentiments, The Washington Post learned that a top-level Army policy board has recommended a somewhat similar reorganization plan for the Guard and Reserves.

Composed of five high-ranking Regulars and a like number of top guardsmen and reservists, the board was asked what to do about President Truman's demand that the Reservists components be rejuvenated and be put in a state of readiness. An interim report on what has been done is due at the White House December 15.

Without mentioning the "touchy" question of UMT, the board urged a revision of the planned organization for the civilian components to a more practical plan and creation of more Reserve units, it was said.

General Walsh Voices Views

Maj. Gen. Ellard A. Walsh of Minnesota, president of the National Guard Association, declares that the Guard cannot be built beyond a strength of 375,000 to 400,000 officers and men without universal training.

"The basic assumpton of our entire Guard and Reserve policy and troop strength," said Walsh in an interview, "is that UMT will be adopted and an adequate number of armories be constructed. Neither has been done.

"We can never achieve the 682,000-man National Guard contemplated under existing plans without UMT. Instead of maintaining 6100 units, including 27 divisions at 80 per cent of war strength, we'll be lucky if we support 5200 units and the divisions at half strength."

Walsh said that a recent poll of State Guard chiefs backed up this conclusion. He declared that while Guard leaders "stand foursquare" for UMT, that there "seems to be no prospect" of its approval at present.

"I've always felt that the War Department has been reluctant to prepare an alternate plan for building the civilian components because it would weaken their case for UMT," he stated. "To go along on this fallacious assumption any longer just doesn't make sense."

Under existing policies for the Guard and Reserves, approved by the War Department in October, 1945, enlisted men would be obtained from men completing six months basic training in UMT camps. They would be required to enroll in some reserve branch for a period of years.

Statement Backed

Brig. Gen. Edward A. Evans, national executive secretary of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States, declared:

"We're heartily in agreement with Walsh's statement. We've insisted for the past two years that the Department of the Army is proceeding on the wrong basis."

Evans did not agree that UMT is doomed at the next session of Congress. A modified plan of four months, summer training such as advocated by the American Legion last year would have some chance, in his opinion. But, he added, that the Army is not likely to go along with such a shortened service period.

The RCA, says Evans, favors dropping UMT as the basis for planning the Guard and Reserves, even if passage were likely next year. They also want "equal priority" with the Guard in the establistment of troop units, something now denied them by the Army General Staff, he stated.

This does not mean that the Reserves want equality in drills, pay, etc., he added, but only that units be created now instead of under the present program of delaying them for 6 to 10 years. In fact, Evans say the ROA wants to scale down plans for "Class A" Reserve units—those that are fully organized as part of the M-day force and take weekly drills.

Only Reserve forces in the M-day force, the ROA urges, should be small supporting units for the Regular Army and Guard. But Reserve divisions and other forces planned under the current long-range program should be created on a skeletonized basis immediately, they urged.

General Walsh wants to keep the present 27 National Guard divisions under any revamping plan, but others feel this would not give the Nation a balanced military force. Vital antiaircraft and supply forces would be eliminated. Instead, they urge cutting the number of Guard divisions to provide adequate supporting forces.

Speaks on atomic energy

Force Binding Atom Nucleus Baffles AEC

Des Moines, Iowa, Dec. 6 (AP).—If you should discover the "glue" that holds the nucleus of the atom together, phone, don't write, the nearest atomic scientist, except those in Moscow.

That's the advice W. W. Waymack, member of the Atomic Energy Commission, gave a group of Phi Beta Kappas tonight.

While scientists have found the nucleus, have a good idea how it is made up and have learned how to split one certain kind of nucleus in a continuous reaction, "the central mystery of the nucleus is understood by no man," he said.

"Our hardest steel is the sheerest fluff, the thinnest wisp, almost an abstraction of empty space, compared with the tight solidity of any atomic nucleus.

"What is the force, the fantastically tremendous force, that makes this happen?

Kapitza Is Excluded

"If any of you gets the answer, say at 3 a. m., don't write, telephone to Fermi at Chicago, Oppenheimer at Princeton, Bohr in Copenhagen or to any of the other giants of nuclear science anywhere on earth, excluding, of course, Kapitza in Moscow."

Addressing the Phi Beta Kappa Association of Des Moines, Waymack said:

"We are just at the beginning of knowledge of the new world of the nucleus and we are just in the beginning of the exploitation of such knowledge as we have."

But from what is known of the nuclear reaction, as demonstrated in the bomb which fell on Hiroshima three years ago, he said these effects are already evident:

1. Concepts of war, of military strategy have changed a great deal.

2. A new industry has suddenly appeared . . . already by conventional measurement the biggest single industry we have.

Usable Power Is Sought

3. A great program of designing and building new nuclear reactors or atomic furnaces is now under way, with production of usable power as a major goal.

4. Production on a scale as large as necessary and at low cost of a wide variety of radioactive substances, and the distribution of these substances to qualified users in every part of the country and also abroad is today a reality.

5. As a result of both reactor development and the expanding use of radioactive atoms, and also because of national defense considerations, we are moving very rapidly into an age in which radioactivity as both tool and problem will be a commonplace of our environment.

But, Wymack commented:

"In the face of all this which is discernable, in the face of all that is to come which can not now possibly be discerned, our people as a whole are still appallingly uninformed as to 'the facts of life' about their new world and about the shape and import of the problems that have to be wisely solved, or else."

Waymack revealed that on December 2, 1942, Dr. Arthur Compton, at Chicago, wired to Dr. James Conant at Washington.

"The Italian Navigator has landed—the natives are friendly."

The message meant that the scientists working at Chicago University, headed by Enrico Fermi, Italian, had started, sustained and controlled the first nuclear chain reaction in history.

Breakdown of Dutch Talks Is Blow to U. S.

News of the breakdown of Dutch- Indonesian negotiations in Java came yesterday as a blow to American hopes and American policy.

Hopes were high in Washington two weeks ago when Foreign Minister Derek U. Stikker of the Netherlands left for Java with a multi-party delegation to negotiate a settlement with the Indonesian Republic.

Officials here felt that with men of good will in control on both sides, there might be an agreement that would end the long stalemate in Java and release vitally needed supplies for European and world recovery.

Now Stikker is on his way home without an agreement. He intends to consult his cabinet in the Hague as soon as he returns, and to explain why the negotiations broke down.

Official Washington, which for more than a year has tried to encourage an agreement, was disappointed and dismayed at the news. Last night, however, a report received here suggested that the Dutch had not yet shut the door on a possible future agreement.

Emanuel Sassen, the Netherlands Minister for Overseas Territories, said on leaving Java with Stikker, "There is a possibility that the Netherlands delegation is returning to Indonesia." And when he was asked whether he was still an optimist, he added that he was "always optimistic."

Mahoney Traffic Charge Dropped

The Corporation Counsel's office yesterday nolle prossed a driving-while-drunk charge against George H. Mahoney, 38, of 35 M st. nw.

Mahoney was held for Municipal Court after he was arrested last September following an accident in the 1600 block of Rhode Island ave. ne.

The Corporation Counsel's office said the charge was dropped because there existed no available evidence placing Mahoney behind the wheel of his car at the time of the accident.

Egypt Hints Willingness to Accept Armistice

Paris, Dec. 6 (AP).—An Egyptian delegate indicated in the United Nations tonight that Egypt is willing to accept a Palestine armistice if Israel withdraws her forces from the Negev.

However, when an Israeli representative asked that the statement be sent to Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, the acting Palestine mediator in Jerusalem, the Egyptian said he was not speaking officially but merely explaining the position of his government toward Security Council resolutions.

The Israeli representative, Aubrey Eban, said if Egypt had made such a statement it would be important in this respect: It would be the first time any Arab spokesman had offered to accept any kind of armistice in the Holy Land war. Nevertheless, it would add little to the argument, because Israel has announced she would not give up the Negev under any circumstances. A cease-fire — as differentiated from an armistice—now is in effect in Palestine.

When the Egyptian delegate, Mahmoud Fawzi Bey, qualified his statement, Eban said: "There is no Egyptian acceptance. In my opinion, the Egyptian delegate put forward such a suggestion and then withdrew it, when challenged."

Fawzi Bey had made the statement before the seven-nation Palestine committee of the Security Council. He said Egypt accepted the principle of the council's November 4 and November 16 resolutions. The November 4 resolution directed troops in southern Palestine to withdraw to positions held before October 14, the date of Israel's successful offensive in the Negev. The November 16 resolution asked an Arab-Jewish armistice.

Talks Encourage Bunche In View Peace Is Near

Haifa, Dec. 6 (NYHT).—After two days of lengthy talks with Arab and Israeli leaders, Dr. Ralph D. Bunche, acting United Nations mediator for Palestine, declared today that he believed the end of the Palestinian conflict was not far off. He said that "a real possibility" existed for speedy implementation of the armistice agreement.

Czech Airline Hostess Bore Sternist Messages

Acre, Israel, Dec. 6 (U.P.). — A Czech airline hostess testifying at the trial of two suspended leaders of the outlawed Jewish Stern gang said today she had carried verbal and written messages between persons in Czechoslovakia and Sternists in Israel.

Edita Moracova, 22, testified while wearing her blue airline uniform. She herself is a prisoner accused of being a Sternist.

cluding wartime Premier Hideki Tojo.

None of the executions will be carried out until there is a decision by the high court, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced last week.

Justices Black, Douglas, Murphy and Rutledge joined with Justice Jackson in agreeing to hear the Japanese petitions. Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Reed, Frankfurter and Burton were "of the opinion that there is want of jurisdiction."

"This public division of the court, equal if I do not participate," wrote Justice Jackson, "puts the United States before the world, and particularly before Oriental peoples, in this awkward position:

"Having major responsibility for the capture of these Japanese prisoners, it also has responsibility for their fate. If their plea ends in stalemate in this court, the authorities have no course but to execute sentences, which half of this court tells the world are on so doubtful a legal foundation that they favor some kind of provisional relief and fuller revew. . . ."

On the other hand, he said, "For this court now to call up these cases for judicial review under exclusively American law can only be regarded as a warning to our associates in the trials that no commitment of the President or of the military authorities . . . has finality or validity under our form of Government until it has the approval of this court."

"Choice Between Evils"

Justice Jackson said he does not strictly regard himself as disqualified from the Japanese cases as from the German cases, despite his work in the pioneering Nuernberg trial, because the Japanese trials were held under different authority and agreement.

He termed the issues "truly great ones," and despite his reluctance to participate, he said, "The horns between which I must choose in the dilemma are . . . a choice between evils."

In the final decision, he expressed hope his vote would not be needed, but said he would vote in event of a deadlock.

One of the attorneys who filed the Japanese petitions is David F. Smith, of Washington, now living at the Roger Smith Hotel. Back from Japan nine months, he participated in part of the trials and said he initiated the petitions to the Supreme Court.

Said Smith yesterday: "The whole trial in Japan was conducted in a high-handed, God-almighty sort of way. In New York last night, Tokyo Trial Prosecutor Joseph B. Keenan said he would represent General MacArthur in the Supreme Court proceedings.

Alabama Decision

The Supreme Court's rejection of the attempt to order Alabama's electoral votes cast for Truman and Barkley was made without written opinion, and Justice Black took no part in the consideration.

Governor Folsom and three Alabama voters sought the order after they were turned down by the Alabama Supreme Court. Alabama's Democratic electors vote on December 13.

In its decision upholding the Portal-to-Portal Act yesterday, the high court refused to hear an appeal filed by 74 employes of the General Motors Corp.

The employes had been unsuccessful in lower courts in suits for make-work claims which are barred by the portal act of 1947. Such claims are barred by the act unless recognized by past practice or specified in labor-management contracts.

In the application of the Fair Labors Standard Act of Bermuda, involving overtime claims for men employed by American contractors Justice Reed said for the majority in the 5-4 vote that Bermuda could technically be construed a "possession" of the United States under the act, but:

". . . We predicate our views on the issue presented upon the postulate that the leased area is under the sovereignty of Great Britain and that it is not territory of the United States in a political sense. . . ."

International "Anxiety" Feared

Speaking for the minority, however, Justice Jackson said Congress could make Government contractors pay a premium for overtime in Bermuda, but to do it by declaring that even for the purposes of the act Bermuda can be construed as a "possession" of the United States, will cause "considerable anxiety" in international affairs. Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Frankfurter and Burton joined in the dissent.

In other cases yesterday:

The Supreme Court agreed to review an appeal by Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., from a ruling of the Civil Aeronautics Board which denied TWA a retroactive mail rate increase. The United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia agreed with CAB. The Justice Department also agreed, but seeks a high court ruling.

A review of rents at the 500-apartment unit Merrimac Park project, in Norfolk, Va., was refused by the Supreme Court. Sailors living there said rents were increased "nearly 90 per cent" since September, 1945, but the Norfolk Housing Authority said the project, which it operates, has rents within comparable rates in private projects.

The Supreme Court also refused to review a trepassing conviction against Dan Leroy Hall of Richmond, Va., a Jehovah's Witnesses minister fined $5 and costs for trespassing in an apartment building there in 1946.

According to briefs, building regulations required permission to be obtained from each tenant for door-to-door soliciting. Virginia Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, jr., said this did not infringe on constitutional rights.

Tribunal Voted 6 to 5

Tokyo, Dec. 6 (AP). — The death penalty for five of the seven Japanese war lords sentenced to hang was approved by a 6 to 5 vote of the international military tribunal, reliable sources said today.

War Premier Hideki Tojo and Gen. Heitaro Kimura, once Tojo's Vice Minister, were given the death penalty by a vote of 7 to 4, the informants said.

All seven prisoners have received stays of execution pending an appeal by two of them to the United States Supreme Court. The two are former Premier Koki Hirota and Gen. Kenji Doihara. Also sentenced to the gallows were Gens. Seishiro Itagaki, Iwane Matsui and Akira Muto.

The sources said Sir William Webb, president of the 11-member war crimes tribunal, and Maj. Gen. I. M. Zaryanov of Russia refused to vote for death on grounds their own courts do not inflict such a penalty.

AMA Revolt Seen Over Health Fight

Boston, Dec. 6 (AP).—A noted physician today predicted a revolt in the medical profession against the American Medical Association's plan to raise $3,500,000 to fight President Truman's proposed national health insurance program.

Dr. Channing Frothingham, twice president of the Massachusetts Medical Society and chairman of the Committee For the Nation's Health, contended the AMA's house of delegates, which announced a $25 levy on doctors, is not representative of the association's 140,000 members.

Its action, he said, "is likely to precipitate a grass roots rebellion among the ranks of American doctors."

"It is particularly disturbing," the doctor added, "to note that although many physicians of the AMA's membership support national health insurance, the proposal to embark on a Nation-wide multimillion dollar campaign against it was not made known to the membership in advance of the closed session at which the decision was reached."

Dr. Frothingham said the Committee For the Nation's Health, which he described as a national nonpartisan organization of doctors and laymen, will "wholeheartedly support the Administration's proposals

Four Papers Plan Double Space Use

Atlanta, Dec. 6 (AP).—The Atlanta Constitution will demonstrate in Tuesday's issue a means of combating the newsprint shortage by using space twice, for market reports and for advertising.

Big block letters, printed diagonally in color across the top half of the stock quotations on the financial page, will read "Fly Delta's New DC-6's to Chicago, 2 Hours and 20 Minutes Nonstop."

The advertiser, Delta Air Lines, said similar ads had been accepted for publication Tuesday in the Jacksonville Journal, and the Miami Daily News. The Miami Beach Sun plans to print the ad by the Ben Day process to produce a gray block letter in lieu of color.

B. D. Adams of Burke Dowling Adams, Montclair, N. J., head of the advertising agency which places Delta's advertising, conceived the idea, and said it never had been used previously in the United States as far as he could ascertain.

Adams said the plan of "underprinting" a sales message in color could be used equally well on want ad pages or on any pages containing solid masses of reading matter. He said the idea was "public property" after Tuesday's issues as far as he was concerned, and could be adopted by any paper or any advertiser.

Union Men Refuse To Testify on Raid

Kalamazoo, Mich., Dec. 6 (AP).—Five officers of the CIO steelworkers refused to testify today at a congressional hearing into the December 1 raid on the Shakespeare companies.

Their attorney, Frank Donner, called the hearing "lurid" and said Representative Hoffman (R., Mich.) was conducting it "like a prosecutor."

Hoffman retorted that "radical labor leaders seem to think the recent election gave them license to go high, wide and handsome."

He predicted possible tightening of existing labor laws and added "that raid did more to hurt unions than 50 Hoffmans could do in 20 years."

Donner stuck to his position, however, telling Hoffman that "I don't believe the story can be fairly presented here."

The five leaders of local unions of the USW-CIO were to be question about predawn raids in which eight persons were injured, cars overturned and property damaged.

Hoffman asked Ralph E. Smith, president of Local 3197, USW-CIO:

"Do you as a citizen or local officer approve of the type of violence that occurred at the Shakespeare plants December 1?"

"I will answer to the grand jury, but not to you," Smith replied.

A one-man State grand jury also is investigating the invasion of the struck plants by some 300 unionists.

Hoffman said that he planned to question CIO President Philip Murray about the raid.

He said he would call Murray to Washington and ask him if he ordered his CIO United Steel Workers to make the raid or knew about it in advance.

"I expect he will say no," Hoffman commented.

Murray also will be asked if he approves of "that kind of violence," the Congressman added.

Veteran city police officers earlier testified they were too "overwhelmingly outnumbered" to try to break up the invasion by the 300 unionists.

The USW-CIO members have been on strike at the plants since September 7 in a dispute over seniority and probationary provisions in their contract. Wages are not an issue.

Penn. U. Dedicates $200,000 Atomic Lab

Philadelphia, Dec. 6 (AP).—The University of Pennsylvania today dedicated a $200,000 atomic laboratory.

The new building will be used by the university's department of physics to carry on nuclear research jointly with the Office of Naval Research of the United States Navy Department.

Housed in the lab is a betratron or atom-smasher capable of accelerating electrons to energies of 22 million volts. Because of the machine's high radiation, sections of wall are five feet thick.

Lieut. Mulligan Named President Of Police Society

Mulligan

Lieut. Ernest H. (Mike) Mulligan, of the Colmar Manor, Md., police force, has been elected president of the Prince Georges County Municipal Police Association for the coming year.

He succeeds Sergt. Robert A. Baker, of the Hyattsville town police department.

Other officers are Detective Earl J. Huber, of the Prince Georges County force, first vice president; Lieut. James Mines, of the Fairmount Heights town department, second vice president; Pvt. O. W. Wheeler, of Landover Hills, secretary, and Chief Carl Schatz, of Brentwood, treasurer.

NMLA Executive Asserts Control Laws Not Needed

The board of directors of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association was told yesterday by Executive Vice President R. A. Colgan, jr., that they would have "to be constantly alert . . . to save what is left of a free economy."

"This," Colgan declared, at the opening of the board's annual meeting, at Hotel Shoreman, "is the only way that we can assure the Nation of a return to a free economy and a republican form of government."

NLMA President A. J. Glassow, reiterating the organization's position, emphasized that "legislative controls are not necessary to assure prosperity."

Later, the committee on forest conservation of the NLMA adopted a report which stated "there are ample timber resources in the United States to meet any war emergency."

have a square and honest administration."

Gustave Faber, Quill-indorsed candidate from New York City, was elected secretary-treasurer. He defeated Hugh O'Donnell of Philadelphia, an independent candidate nominated from the floor, 462 to 209½.

Faber has been under investigation for allegedly embezzling about $8900 from Local 100, TWU, New York. He termed the accusation a "smear attempt on the part of the Communists."

The delegates, by standing vote, eliminated the positions of director of organization and executive vice president. John Santo is currently director of organization and Austin Hogan, executive vice president. Santo is awaiting deportation to Hungary as an undersirable alien.

Elected by standing vote as International vice presidents were:

Frank O'Sonnor, New York; Andrew Kaelin, Philadelphia; Richard Downes, New York; Jules Harvel, New York; Matthew Guinan, New York; Ellis Van Riper, New York; Mark Kavanagh, New York, and William Grogan, San Fransicso.

Quill, outspoken head of the anti left-wing element within the union, has been president since it was organized in 1936.

The election was marked by long and frequently disorderly periods. At one time, for five minutes, the delegates and observers engaged in much shouting over a parliamentary maneuver of the rightists within the union.

The afternoon session was similarly marked by disorder.

After a scene of near-bedlam the delegates approved the opening-day recommendation of the rules committee for election on the opening day.

Cries of "railroad" and "shotgun election" greeted the rules committee's report. In a moment the hotel ballroom was a dine of shouts and screams from some 325 delegates and union observers.

The move was contrary to the usual practice of holding elections late in the convention—which is scheduled to run six days.

How do you use "oil"?

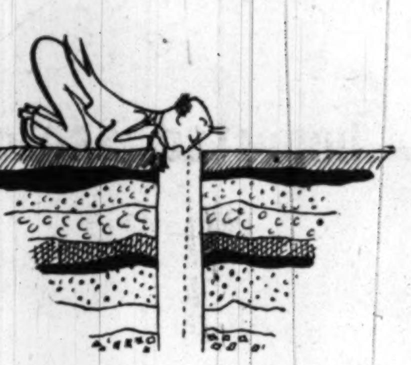
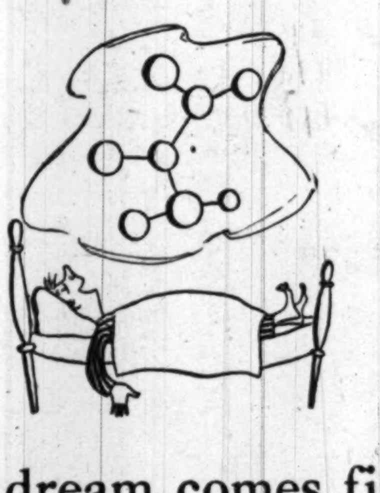
At Shell, petroleum becomes over 1000 products

Increased number of Shell products widens the uses of petroleum in agriculture, science, industry, motoring, and the home . . .



Look a little deeper:

You think of petroleum most often as gasoline and oil to run your car—fuel oil to heat your home. Actually, through the magic of "petrochemistry," petroleum now becomes many different products—touching your life at many points, and many times each day.



The dream comes first:

Shell scientists, with petroleum as their chemical raw material, build your new products on ideas. Atoms are shifted to make new molecules, and the materials created may start new industries . . . fill shortages . . . replace familiar but inferior substances.

Paint and powder:

Cosmetics and house paints are now better because of "oil" . . . as are fabrics, overshoes, safety glass, plywood, inks. Petroleum becomes fertilizers and pest killers for farmers . . . antiseptics and anesthetics . . . plastics for industry, glycerin, and even alcohol. How many ways do you use "oil"?

What's ahead:

Shell history, which has already seen 7 products grow to more than 1000, indicates continued growth. Hundreds of scientists, in the most modern laboratories of their kind, are working with petroleum molecules—to give you greater convenience, comfort, mobility, and better health.

Auto Men Warned On Title Reports

District Traffic Director George E. Keneipp is serving formal notice today that auto dealers who fail to comply with local vehicle title and registration regulations will face police action.

The notice is in form letters mailed yesterday to all registered dealers in new and used cars, junk dealers, and finance companies, Keneipp said. Word that the letters were in the mail was given last night by Secretary Fred L. Haller to the Washington Automotive Trade Association at the group's monthly business meeting. About 150 persons attended the dinner meeting at Hotel 2400.

evcurate Record Pledged

Keneipp had announced that such a letter would be sent out by his office. His announcement followed disclosures to the House subcommittee investigating questionable trade practices that in some instances required weekly reports on used cars received in local auto transactions had not been filed with the District Building.

The letter says that starting at once, the registrar of titles and tags will maintain an accurate record of all reports that come in. The reports are due each Tuesday for used cars received the preceding week. On Wednesdays, the letter said, Keneipp's office will get the names of those who have failed to file the reports. The names will be referred to the traffic division of the Metropolitan Police Department for "appropriate action," the letter said.

Keneipp declared that another part of the letter, referring to sections 38 and 39 of the regulations, was to avoid violations in the use of dealers' tags.

Goldsmith Heard

The auto trade group also heard Ralph L. Goldsmith, president of the Washington Better Business Bureau, outline the program of his organization. He urged that more auto dealers consider joining the Better Business Bureau. "You don't want Government regulation of your business," he commented. "I think we're privileged to run our business as we see fit. It's a privilege we want to protect. The Better Business Bureau offers one of the best ways to do that."

Goldsmith is vice president and general manager of Lansburgh & Bro. department store.

There was no formal discussion of the Capitol probe during the business meeting.

ABC Board Studies Scheiter Application

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday took under advisement an application by Laurence F. Scheiter, 1500 Ogden st. nw., for a license for the off-sale of beer and light wine.

Members of the nearby Fourth Church of Christ Scientist, 3505 16th st. nw., appeared at a hearing on the application, to protest issuing of a license. A similar application by Scheiter was denied a year ago.

Need In Our Midst

In spite of a 7 per cent cut in public assistance grants, District welfare officials fear that their funds will be exhausted before the end of the current fiscal year. While the failure of the Community Chest drive to reach its subscription goal will increase the pressure on public agencies, the basic cause of the District's plight is the failure of Congress to make decent provision for the city's welfare needs. There is much to be said for the old maxim that charity begins at home. Certainly there is no excuse for denying to local agencies funds desperately needed to alleviate distress while millions of dollars are being appropriated and raised for the relief of people in foreign lands.

High wages, record employment and general prosperity have not eliminated the demands for public assistance. On the contrary, they have helped to create conditions that increase the drain on relief funds. There are at all times in every community families and individuals who have to be helped or supported entirely by public or private charity. The rise in living costs has also shifted into the dependent category some families in low-income groups that would formerly have been able to manage without outside assistance. Furthermore, the rise in prices entails corresponding increases in the amount of money needed by applicants for aid. The situation here is further complicated, as Assistant Director Clapp of the District Department of Welfare says, by the rapid rise in the local birth rate which in turn aggravates housing congestion—another serious problem.

All these developments put a heavy strain on marginal family groups and have a disintegrating influence on family life. G. Howland Shaw, chairman of the Advisory Committee of the Juvenile Court, in a letter to the District Commissioners indorsing the appeal of the Board of Public Welfare for additional funds, asserted that the restrictive regulations of the Public Assistance Division have "a direct bearing on the final breakdown of the family structure." He cited the sharp rise in cases of dependency and nonsupport coming before the Juvenile Court in support of his contention. Cases have been referred to the Juvenile Court, Mr. Shaw says, where the head of the family was able to work only spasmodically. Yet such families, regardless of the number of small children in the home, were not eligible for public assistance, and there are no private agencies equipped to provide relief.

Humanitarian considerations apart—and they should be sufficiently compelling to insure prompt and adequate assistance when really needed—it is a penny-wise, pound-foolish policy to try to save money by withholding aid from families that, given timely assistance, might be kept together, thereby reducing the number of neglected and delinquent children who become public charges.

Saving The Records

Where would the writers of history go for their source material if they could not depend upon libraries to preserve the records of the past? That is the question raised by a reminder from the head of the reference department of New York City's Public Library that all the books published since 1870 when rag paper was replaced by paper made from wood pulp have a comparatively short life. The Gutenberg Bible printed nearly 500 years ago, Mr. Rice says, is in much better condition than most of the books published 50 or 60 years ago. At maximum a wood-pulp book may last about a hundred years, while newspapers and pamphlets last not more than 50 years, if handled carefully and not used too often.

Anyone who has had occasion to delve into the newspaper files of a few years ago will probably conclude that the 50-year life limit is an ultra-generous estimate. Yet newspapers and pamphlets are the major source of the material from which the student of modern history derives his information. Without them, only a vague, distorted picture of the living conditions and the social and economic problems of a past era could be obtained. Consequently, libraries are confronted with the problem of preserving their invaluable but rapidly decaying collections of ephemeral publications as well as the slightly more durable books on their shelves.

A solution of their problem has fortunately been found through microfilming. But like most things these days, the process is costly and time-consuming. As a result librairies, including the New York Public Library, are unable to keep abreast of the pace of disintegration. Mr. Rice's suggestion that the cost of microfilming be reduced and coverage made more comprehensive by an agreement among the libraries to concentrate on special fields is excellent. If this advice is followed, the historian of the future may be spared the labor of bending over dusty and unwieldy tomes and escape the even greater irritation of being told to handle tenderly the crumbling relics of what was once a stout and legible record of things past.

Votes For Freedom

The population of Berlin has put the American people to shame in the matter of voting. Nearly 85 per cent of the 1,500,000 persons eligible to vote in the Western sectors of the beleaguered city went to the polls in Sunday's municipal election in spite of fog and rain and threats from the Communists. In other words, nearly every non-Communist of voting age went to the polls. Even more significant is the fact that many risked danger to themselves in order to vote against Communist tyranny. To discourage voting the Soviet authorities ordered all persons employed in the Russian zone to work all day Sunday. Labor unions thwarted this maneuver by calling a strike of transport workers until 10 a. m. so as to give the workers ample time to vote.

This remarkable showing was possible, of course, because the future of Berlin and perhaps all of Germany was at stake. The Berliners were voting for their freedom, perhaps even for their lives. But when every consideration is given to the uniqueness of the Berlin drama, the contrast between the response of the people there and that of Americans in the recent election is nonetheless shocking.

No State-by-State figures on the percentage of people voting in the United States are available since 1940. In that year only two States—Utah, with 83.1 per cent and West Virginia with 83 per cent—came close to the Berlin record on Sunday. Most of the Northern and Western States had fairly creditable records, but the showing of the South was deplorable. The percentage of potential voters going to the polls varied from 42.7 per cent in North Carolina to 10.1 per cent in South Carolina. Of Mississippi's potential voters only 14.7 per cent went to the polls; of Georgia's, only 17.7; of Alabama's, 18.9; of Louisiana's, 27.3, and of Texas', 28.1.

"He only earns his freedom and existence," said Goethe, "who daily conquers them anew." One cannot look at the low vote in this country last November, when 51 per cent of our eligibles cast their ballots, without a painful conviction that a vast number of Americans do not take our democratic system very seriously. The record is a powerful argument against poll taxes, Negro disfranchisement and the one-party system in the South and against block voting by States for presidential candidates. We hope that these defects will be corrected by appropriate State and national legislation and constitutional amendment. More important than any legislative changes, however, is an awakening of the people to their opportunities and duties as members of a free society.

Another Wheat Pact

American participation in the revived international wheat pact will receive a boost from the first speculations as to the size of the 1949 wheat crop. As the world food situation improves, there is less demand for American wheat abroad. Yet farmers have planted 10 per cent more acreage than the amount suggested by the Department of Agriculture, and if the 1948 yield per acre is repeated, the 1949 crop may be 1400 million bushels, or some 700 million above normal domestic consumption. Hence what to do with wheat surpluses is no far-distant problem. Government buying of excess grain is no solution. Storage facilities will not accommodate a surplus of that size, and even if they could, merely stacking up wheat like Fort Knox gold would lead to an uneconomic dead end.

It was to help meet precisely such situations that the world wheat pact was originally conceived by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization. The agreement negotiated last March failed to take effect largely because Congress did not appreciate its significance for this country. Now there is to be another try. The result in part of broadened American enthusiasm, a new world wheat conference has been called to meet in Washington January 25 to discuss the terms of a new pact.

Obviously, with improving food conditions elsewhere, there will be an effort to revise the price scales in the wheat agreement. Under the old pact, importing countries agreed to take 500 million bushels of wheat a year from exporting nations. The United States' share was 185 million bushels. Ceiling prices were set at $2 a bushel, whereas floor prices were to range from $1.50 to $1.10 in the fifth year. A certain lukewarmness in British support of the pact was noted while it was before Congress because of the possibility that wheat could be purchased outside the agreement at a lower price. The consequence of congressional delay may well be that the United States will have to accept a less favorable price structure.

On the other hand, there is a bright spot in the new interest in the wheat agreement shown by Argentina, which along with Russia so far has remained aloof. It may be suspected that this interest results not so much from a conversion in principle as from the fact that Argentina's price hi-jacking on grain has begun to backfire. Nonetheless, the more exporting nations that are encompassed in the pact, the greater are its chances of reconciling supply and demand.

If the new agreement is approved by Congress, there remain some fundamental inconsistencies in farm policy that must be ironed out to make it fully effective respecting American surpluses. For example, the current support price of wheat is $2.24 a bushel, and market prices are somewhat above that figure. Obviously, if this price structure still prevailed after the pact went into effect, the Government would take a loss in meeting international commitments at lower prices. Such a contradiction is ridiculous on the face of it. It is a contradiction that stems from the fact that wheat support prices are still pegged at 90 per cent of parity—a condition which in turn is responsible for at least some of the overproduction. The Aiken law, which goes into effect in 1950, will do much to correct this situation with its sliding scale of support prices ranging from 60 to 90 per cent of parity, depending on supply. The prospect of a loss on artificially encouraged production ought to be a reminder to Congress not to tamper with the Aiken law.

These are questions of domestic detail, however, which do not affect the long-range advantage to be gained from participation in the international wheat agreement. Any such agreement entails compromises, for it cuts two ways in attempting to provide better distribution for the world's food. It benefits importing nations in time of need and exporting countries in time of surplus—and the United States is rapidly approaching the point where it will need help in providing markets for its agriculture.

Embarrassed Court

Most thoughtful citizens will applaud Justice Jackson's decision to break the four-to-four tie in the Supreme Court in favor of hearing the appeal of the condemned Japanese war lords. It would have been tragic if an evenly divided court had declined to hear an issue of this sort. Men would have gone to the gallows under circumstances casting serious doubt upon the validity of their condemnation. Aside from the legal issues involved, it seems to us highly desirable to have the Supreme Court examine any facet of the case that may be properly laid before it.

In no circumstances will the court pass upon the guilt or innocence of the condemned war lords. Its examination will be confined to the questions of whether the Supreme Court has jurisdiction in cases of this sort and whether the Far Eastern Military Tribunal which passed the sentences was legally established. Narrow as these points under review are, the country will be better satisfied to have the arguments of the condemned men heard for whatever they may be worth.

At the moment the point to which the action of the court gives most striking emphasis is the undesirability of taking men off the bench for nonjudicial assignments. Justice Jackson had previously disqualified himself to sit in this case because of his service as prosecutor for the United States in the Nuernberg trials after which the trials in Japan were patterned. Even now he says that he will not vote in the final decision unless it is once again necessary to break a deadlock. Obviously that is an unsatisfactory arrangement. However objective Mr. Jackson may be in his approach to this case, if his vote becomes necessary, he is not likely to be regarded by the world as an impartial judge in the matter.

Great as was his service at Nuernberg, his departure from the bench for that purpose has now brought grave embarrassment upon the Supreme Court. We only hope that the President will remember the court's present predicament if he is again inclined to take men from the bench for nonjudicial work.

One Defense Or Three

The proposal to elevate Mr. Sidney Souers to the position now occupied by Admiral William D. Leahy as Chief of Staff to the President illustrates one of the basic inconsistencies of the present kind of unification. These inconsistencies result both from flaws in the Unification Act itself and from the failure of the three services fully to implement the act as it stands. This newspaper has supported Secretary Forrestal against carping critics who expect too much in too short a time, but acknowledgment of the genuine accomplishments under unification only makes more necessary an effort to correct the defects.

There is no more reason for the President to have a personal Chief of Staff than for him to have a personal army. The effect of this ex-officio position, irrespective of the ability of the holder, is to undercut the authority of the Secretary of Defense. If there is to be a single Chief of Staff of the armed forces—an idea which has merit—he ought to be within the military establishment, under the Secretary of Defense. Such a change would require action by Congress, as would another desirable alteration of the unification structure—the reconstituting of the three separate service secretaries as Assistant Secretaries of Defense responsible to an Undersecretary. But the President has it within his power to correct one of the anomalies by abolishing the position held by Admiral Leahy when the latter retires on January 1.

DOGWOOD BERRIES

The dogwood berries are like magic fruit,
Protruding boldly from the turning leaves
And set like isis in a lover's suit;
With similar attraction. Their prospective thieves
Are flocks of hungry robins, who engage
To pick the harvest and to set the stage
On which the acorns fall in doomed ascent,
With swirling leaves, which, in preserving trend,
Even decaying, will rebuild the soil:
Life's mechanism in slow recoil.
You wanderer need not be distressed:
For every bit of matter, soil-processed
Will feed the spring with its recurring joy.
Dead matter, then transformed, in life's employ.

Italian Colonies

Apropos of Sumner Welles' column of November 30, I wish to protest against all this propaganda aimed at giving Italy back her former colonies.

One of the main talking points seems to be "give Italy land so that she may feed herself." Let us remember that only a part of the population of Italy is willing to farm. Second, her notoriously poor record as a colonizing nation casts further doubt upon the matter.

Italy's contribution to the general welfare of the world is not such that the world is willing to see her rewarded for her misdeeds, as the opportunists in this country try to imply. Even when she turned traitor the second time and became our unwilling ally, the aid she gave was of very doubtful quality. Because our propaganda triumphed over the Italian elections momentarily, there immediately was given a great impetus to the idea to give her back her former colonies.

The world as a whole will view it as a reward for evil, if Italy is given back Libya, Eritrea, and Somaliland (the latter two formerly belonging to the poor Abyssinians who were our allies when Mussolini was ruling Italy.) Let us remember that a positive ally is the only one that is any good in a fight, not one that has to be won over.

U. N. And China

China's tragic plight and America's role in the complex Chinese situation can be seen in a sharper focus if we recall the words of Bishop Ralph A. Ward of the Methodist Episcopal Church, written in a letter from Shanghai. This letter of Bishop Ward was published in "Foundry Facts" of the Foundry Church on November 30, 1939.

"This ship which brought us to China, owned and controlled by the American Government, spent many hours in harbors of Japan unloading scrap iron, scrap steel, and scrap tin and cotton. That means more reinforcements for the (Japanese) invaders of China. America is still a valuable ally against the democracy of eastern Asia. Under such conditions we of the Christian church go forward at our tasks."

To the sincere and heart-felt letter of Bishop Ward, the editors of "Foundry Facts" added the following commentary: "There ought to be a mighty Christian protest against this thing continuing any farther. Millions of Christians ought to bombard Congress, demanding that an embargo be put at once upon all these death weapons going from America to Japan."

To this it may be added that if 10 or 15 years ago we had taken seriously the pleadings and warnings of such sincere and true friends of the Chinese as the Methodist Bishop Ward, then the Chinese would not have lost faith in us (having seen how from 1931 almost to the Pearl Harbor attack we sold war materials to the Japanese) and then they would not have allied themselves in desperation with the Chinese Red "Liberation Movement" to mobilize resistance against the Japanese invaders of China.

Why not let the United Nations try its hand at settling the China situation? At least an attempt should be made to bring about a temporary truce or armistice in China, which could be used for the exchange of prisoners, for the purpose of taking medical measures to control epidemics, to distribute relief supplies to the civilian populations on both sides, and to permit the noncombatant civilians and women and children to evacuate the besieged cities. All these humanitarian measures, and others, could be organized and carried out under the sponsorship of United Nations and International Red Cross teams.

"The Fourth Round"

The editorial, "The Fourth Round," deserves some discussion.

On July 26, 1948, you carried on your editorial page a lovely little story entitled "The Silver Lining." In this story you told us about "strong market forces" shaping up to bring prices down. All they have been able to do during the past seven months is bring the Bureau of Labor Statistics cost of living index down by one half of one per cent.

I fully agree with your statement that "the inflationary spiral resulting from sustained pressure for higher wages cannot continue forever." However, may I prevail upon you to please explain to the public how it is that labor alone, through "voluntary action," can forestall the evil results which will ensue from "inexorable pressure of economic forces" which "will ultimately put a stop to inflation by harsher means . . . an industrial recession?"

Also, I agree fully with the statement that "the best hope for maintenance of a high level of industrial activity lies in a stable price structure." The catch is, you want labor to take the lead to bring about "price stability" by "pursuing a policy of voluntary restraint as regards wage demands."

Korean Political Labels

The recent exchange of letters concerning Korea serves to emphasize the misuse of the terms "left" and "right" as they are applied to political thinking in that country.

General Hodge, woefully unprepared for the job facing him in Korea, set out to label men and parties. Having little else to guide him, he employed as a yardstick the attitude of the individuals concerned toward Soviet Russia. A Communist, by this system, became a "leftist" while a non-Communist, no matter what his political beliefs otherwise, became a "rightist." Syngman Rhee, being a vociferous anti-Communist at a time when official United States policy favored collaboration with Russia, thus became an "extreme rightest." Needless to say, Communists throughout the world made capital of these tags so carelessly applied to non-Communists by United States officials.

While he was chairman of the Democratic Council of South Korea, Dr. Rhee outlined a program for Korea which so far as I know he has not yet abandoned. This program included the nationalization of all heavy industry, mines, public utilities, banks, communication and transportation systems; the breaking up of all large private estates and redistribution of them to small farmers; and systems of social security and socialized medicine.

Can this be the same Syngmah Rhee that Mr. Yong Jeung Kim November 28 letter refers to as an "extreme reactionary?" Certainly this indicates a confusion in definition of terms and certainly anyone sincerely interested in the future of Korea should not prolong that confusion.

Religion In The Schools

I should like to congratulate the Very Rev. Francis J. Connell (letter published December 1) on his fine array of pertinent quotations by Horace Mann. Every thinking Christian certainly would approve of every word quoted.

On the other hand, any thinking Christian should be immediately aware that the majority of the clerics fighting for religious instruction in the schools and Government aid to nonpublic educational institutions are accidentally—or deliberately—confusing the basic terms in the argument: church and religion.

The makers of the Constitution as well as the founders of this Nation, and Horace Mann himself, have all admitted a generous support in favor of a religious state and a religious people. They have all recognized the needs of religion in the modern world, and in accepting the public schools as the foundation to American democracy, Horace Mann urged an awareness to religious factors in education.

Religion is undeniably a most important part of education, but the teaching of the fundamentals of the great religions is what should be included in schools in courses of history, political science, and literature, and not the narrow dogma of particular sects.

Is there any doubt that the founding fathers foresaw perfectly the difficulty in determining which of a host of varied and widely accepted theologies should receive state sanction in schools supported by taxpayers of all faiths? Naturally they wrote into the Constitution provisions reflecting the thought that the religious training of youth is properly the responsibility of the churches and parents.

Surely, failure to fulfill that responsibility is no excuse for pulling down that "wall between church and state" which is the fortress of our American freedom, and which protects us from the type of ecclesiastical and secular tyranny reported so rampant in Franco's Spain.

"Down Stairway"

Herblock's recent cartoons on the dangers of supporting reputedly Fascist governments are very cleverly conceived as cartoons, but they seem to favor a quite hazardous course of action. Take, for example, the November 28 cartoon, representing a pompous diplomat blindly descending a series of steps labeled as "Anti-Communism Is The Only Issue," then presently describing Fascist governments as dependable, and marking the last step as "Democracy In Bad." The conclusion the reader is to draw, of course, is: Giving any support to China, Greece or Spain is going to lead to dire consequences.

If I were a cartoonist, I would like to draw a picture of Herblock and The Washington Post walking hand in hand down another stairway with the following labeled stairs: (1) "Give no support to any allegedly Fascist government, even when it is holding back communism;" (2) "Support any government that calls itself democratic, no matter how weak it may be or how suspect of being a Communist puppet;" (3) "Even a communistic government is far better than a Fascist one."

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Truman's Cabinet

EVERY President in recent times has had his troubles with the press, and the man who will occupy the White House for the next four years is no exception. Beneath President Truman's smiling jocularity with the reporters who confront him at his press conference is real resentment of the treatment accorded him during the campaign and before.

It is not unlike the resentment which President Roosevelt occasionally voiced in jibes at the working press. This was back of President Truman's statement that there would be no changes in his official family.

He has sometimes been amused, but more often annoyed at the attempts of columnists and others to remake his Cabinet. The President felt it was a good opportunity to teach these eager volunteer helpers a lesson.

Prior to the inauguration on January 20, there will be no changes of any importance. But after that date the way is open for some major shifts in top personnel. The President will have had the satisfaction of putting the columnists in their place.

In his press conference he was careful to point out that he had taken a similar stand when he first moved into the White House in 1945. Then, too, the eager press was ready with myriad suggestions and the President squelched all rumors about impending change.

Not long afterward, however, when the speculation had subsided, a whole series of changes occurred. At the request of the President, most of the New Dealers inherited from the Roosevelt Cabinet stepped out, some with good grace, others fuming at being separated from the prestige of high office.

ATTORNEY General Francis Biddle, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins all went out. A little later Harold L. Ickes made the most spectacular exit after his violent quarrel with the President.

Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan left and so did his protege, Gael Sullivan, who was executive director of the Democratic National Committee. Virtually the only survivor out of the Rooseveltian past is James Forrestal, who was appointed Secretary of the Navy in May, 1944.

This time, of course, the situation is different. Truman's family is of his own creation. Loyalty, which is one of the President's most deeply engrained traits, enters in.

Particularly is this true when his bosom companions of long standing let him understand that they are staying on out of heartfelt duty and at a great sacrifice of their personal interests. They may believe it themselves, but the plain truth is that, in the GI phrase, most of them have never had it so good. Separation from public office would mean the dimmest obscurity.

ANOTHER reason why the President decided to move slowly and cautiously is the long line of candidates eyeing expected vacancies. The White House has been bombarded with propaganda for these candidates, particularly by zealous friends of former Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, who is reported to be campaigning intensively for Forrestal's job as Secretary of Defense.

The top post in the Commerce Department is another being sought by at least three willing helpers. Both in public and in private, they have been pressing their claims and their qualifications. When this furor has subsided, the President will be able to make his own selections without a sense of having someone peer over his shoulder.

During his career in politics the President has taken a great deal of pounding from the press. That was true all during the days of the Pendergast machine, when Truman was sideswiped by the investigation into corruption and crime even though no amount of investigation could ever put any of the blame on him.

The President and the men around him feel strongly that the press did not present the issues of the campaign as the President voiced them in his speeches. They believe that far too much emphasis was placed, instead, on the "give 'em hell" side of the Truman crusade.

There will never be anything like the Roosevelt prescription of a dunce cap for reporters asking unwelcome questions. That would not be in accord with the Truman character. But part of the President's satisfaction in his victory is a sense that he beat the press, too, and he will react strongly against any advice from this source.

Beigin's Ambitions

Your editorials on Israel in the last few weeks have been informed and understanding and, in my opinion, most logical. I am, therefore, surprised at the tone of your November 25 editorial regarding the arrival in this country of Mr. Menachem Beigin, leader of the Irgun Zvi Leumi (underground). I do not know whether Mr. Beigin has aspirations to be the Prime Minister of Israel but I can't see how coming to America can further those ambitions, since only citizens of Israel, not of America, can vote in the Israel elections.

Controlling The Ruhr

A Communication

IN THE current discussion concerning the future of the Ruhr two aspects of the question seem to get consistently confused: security controls that would assure Germany's neighbors against the possibility that the resources of the Ruhr might be used against them militarily at some future date and interference in the German economy by foreign competitors.

If military security is the real aim of international control over the Ruhr, it can be assured without difficulty, both during and after occupation, through a ban on the manufacture of certain specific implements of war, such as artillery, tanks, and planes. Such ban could be made effective by a relatively small number of inspection teams reporting to an international authority, endowed with clearly defined sanctions in case of violations.

This device, tried after the first World War, broke down not because it was faulty or inoperative, but because its authors refused to operate it in the face of a clear challenge by Hitler. Therefore, if certain circles, notably in France, now maintain that something much stronger is needed, they are distrusting not so much the Germans, but themselves and their Allies. But if this distrust is justified, what reason do they have for thinking that more stringent and less justifiable controls will prove more effective this time?

This leads one to the suspicion that the element of economic competition which has so largely entered current thought on the "internationalization" of the Ruhr, has made its appearance not by accident but by design. I will not even argue with those who have recently demanded that both ownership and management of the Ruhr mines and plants be transferred to non-German hands. Their motive is too obviously commercial. But even the London agreement of June 7 of this year provides that the International Authority of the Ruhr shall "make the division of coal, coke and steel from the Ruhr as between German consumption and export."

THIS MEANS in plain language that an international board will have permanent control over the level of German industry, over German home consumption (i. e. the standard of living of the average German), and over the quantity and quality of German exports. The international board, in whose hands these tremendous powers are to be vested, will consist, according to the London protocol, of 15 men, of whom only 3 are to be Germans. At least 9 members of the board would represent countries (France, Britain, and the three Benelux countries), whose industries compete with those of Germany in world markets. Only the 3 members representing the United States might be considered to be commercially neutral.

What will happen under this kind of setup, if Fritz Muller in Stuttgart applies for a larger quota of coal and steel in order to enlarge his export volume to South America? Would the members of the board not have to show superhuman strength of mind not to give the benefit of every doubt to their own fellow-nationals?

And how can an International Authority, armed with the power to distribute the Ruhr's coal, coke, and steel be expected to act in a situation like the recent coal strike in France, which is surely not unlikely to recur in the future? Would the French delegates not insist that the loss of coal at home must be made good by larger Ruhr exports at the expense of German consumers?

IT HAS often been said that the products of the Ruhr must be distributed by an international authority in order to insure wise and just distribution; the alternative, as someone stated, would be to leave the Ruhr's customers "at the mercy of Germany." It has yet to be proved, though, that there is a wiser and juster system of distribution than that which prevails on a free market.

Foreigners have never been barred from buying the products of the Ruhr, nor from selling their products to the Ruhr. If they ask for special privileges now, for special quotas of Ruhr coal and steel to which they shall be entitled regardless of other factors, they are demonstrating a profound disbelief in the wholesomeness of free competition and of the international division of labor.

The London Economist, in its issue of November 20, expresses this very fear and quaintly adds that "whereas Germany's competitors in their drive to secure industrial exports would be limited by the necessity of diverting some of their heavy industrial capacity to armament making, the Germans could devote all their production to serviceable and salable products."

The Economist goes on to say, however, that "in the long run it will be dangerous and indeed impossible to impose upon Germany—save in the single instance of disarmament—a status different from and inferior to that enjoyed by its neighbors." The editors of the liberal London weekly therefore take up and indorse the proposal made last summer by the 11 German Minister Presidents in the Trizone that, if there is to be international control over coal, coke and steel it should not be confined to the Ruhr, but extended over all major producing areas in western Europe. There appears to be considerable logic in this argument: Either international allocation of raw materials is bad because it conflicts with free competition and distorts the international division of labor; or it is good, because it provides more justice to all nations and binds them together in a mutual effort.

WHILE internationalization of all the principal raw material resources of Europe might well promote European unification—though the same result could probably be attained more effectively and with fewer bureaucratic controls through the progressive abolition of trade barriers, the unilateral allocation of Ruhr products would rather tend to divide Europe, viz. into semi-colonial western Germany, and a group of states, united in the purpose of milking their eastern neighbor dry.

One of the principal fallacies in current thinking about the Ruhr is the assumption that Germany can be a source of raw materials to the rest of the world. Prewar Germany, within her old borders, was able to supply only relatively small amounts of coal and steel to her neighbors. The rump-Germany created at Potsdam, let alone Trizonia, deprived of her eastern bread basket and of the coal and steel of Silesia and the Saar, will have to draw much more heavily than before on the raw products of the Ruhr for her own domestic economy and for the production of a greatly increased volume of finished goods for export, without which she can never pay for her food imports.

If, under the guise of security controls, Germany is deprived of such few raw materials as she still possesses, she will perforce have to look for them elsewhere. There are only two directions in which she can look; toward the long-suffering American taxpayers or toward the calculating strategists in the Kremlin.

The President's Calling List

President Truman saw the following White House callers yesterday:

11:00 a. m.—Arthur M. Hill, chairman of the National Security Resources Board;

11:45—Representative Albert Thomas (D., Tex.);

12:00—James Finnegan, collector of Internal Revenue, St. Louis, Mo., and Jack Dwyer, St. Louis city treasurer;

12:15 p. m.—Gen Efisio Marras, chief of staff of the Italian army, and General Omar Bradley;

12:30—Undersecretary of State Lovett;

3:30—Budget Director James E. Webb and Assistant Director Frank Pace.

Unusual Prescription Offered to Reach 100

Bronxville, N. Y., Dec. 6 (AP).—Francesco La Sala believes this prescription helped him reach his 100th birthday: "Setting-up exercises, home-made wine, big black cigars and playing cards all night."

He celebrated the event last night with 150 relatives and friends at a cocktail party and dinner-dance here.

White's "Report On Eastern Europe" Begins Wednesday

What are conditions today in Eastern Europe's iron-curtain countries—Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia? How tight a grip are the Communists maintaining? What is life like for the workers . . . the peasants . . . and the middle class?

Theodore H. White, well-known foreign correspondent, co-author of "Thunder Out of China" and editor of "The Stilwell Papers," has just completed an Eastern European tour. His careful, accurate observations will appear in five special articles, starting in tomorrow's Post.

It's dramatic, important reporting by one of today's top writers. Don't miss this series.

Truman Still Lacks Majority Of Popular Vote in Election

New York, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—President Truman failed to win a majority of the popular votes cast in the November 2 election, the latest United Press tabulation showed tonight.

With the count official from all but eight States, the total vote stood at 48,501,722. Mr. Truman had 24,047,205 votes, a plurality of all the votes cast.

Other presidential candidates polled these votes:

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican, 21,898,628.

Henry A. Wallace, Progressive, 1,138,458.

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, States' Rights Democrat, 1,169,240.

Norman Thomas, Socialist, 106,157.

Refrigeration Engineers' Role Vital, Shreve Tells Conclave

Earl O. Shreve, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, yesterday told members of the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers that their work is one of the basic industries upon which the Nation's economy is dependent.

At a luncheon meeting of several hundred engineers and their wives at the Statler Hotel, Shreve said the industry is more vital in troubled times such as these than in near normal years. Atomic energy production, bomb-proof war plants and modern ships and aircraft, he said, all require some form of air conditioning.

Members of the society, meeting here for their forty-fourth annual convention, also heard several technical reports during a morning session and spent the afternoon sightseeing in the city. Wives of the engineers were guests of the Indian Embassy at an afternoon tea.

Today they will hold second and third technical sessions, attend a domestic refrigerator engineering conference, and a dinner and dance at the Statler Hotel.

The four-day convention will end Wednesday with the installation of officers for 1948-49.

WBCC Wins Kuhn Award

The Oliver Owen Kuhn Memorial Cup was presented last night to Radio Station WBCC, Bethesda, at the regular monthly meeting of the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce in Kenwood Country Club.

The annual award, sponsored by the Washington Star, was presented to Willard D. Egolf, president of Broadcast Management, Inc., by Herbert F. Corn, managing editor of that newspaper.

The cup, which bears the name of a former Star managing editor who lived in Bethesda, is administered by the Chamber of Commerce. The station was selected "in recognition of making an outstanding contribution to the community" during 1947.

Policy Toward U. N.

By Sumner Welles

Fish Or Cut Bait

THE GENERAL Assembly has now entered the final stage of its present session. That the small countries were able to rally world public opinion in their attempt to find a peaceful solution for the contest between the great powers was peculiarly significant. It is unfortunate that their efforts received such meager encouragement from the Big Four.

It is true that when Mexico introduced her resolution appealing to the four great powers to compose their differences they voted for the resolution in a spate of high-flown oratory. But when the crisis became still more acute, and the President of the Assembly and the Secretary General jointly urged the major powers to make a further effort to settle the crisis, and thus prepare the way for general peace settlements, their appeal received a sour reception in Washington.

Officials angrily insinuated that Dr. Evatt and Mr. Lie had exceeded their authority. It was hinted that the Western powers might reject their approach. Leading newspapers and commentators insisted that the step was instigated by the Kremlin to prevent the public from blaming the Soviets for the Berlin crisis. A movement was started in responsible quarters to replace Mr. Lie with a more amenable Secretary General.

The reaction has, in fact, been so bitter that it should raise the question what these officials, as well as many of their fellow citizens, think the United Nations really is.

IN THE very first line of its first article, the Charter declares that it is the purpose of the United Nations "to maintain international peace and security." As President of the General Assembly, Dr. Evatt has no exclusive obligation to the Western powers. He is responsible to the United Nations. As Secretary General, Mr. Lie is specifically empowered by Article 99 of the Charter to "bring to the attention of the Security Council any matter which, in his opinion, may threaten the maintenance of international peace."

It certainly did not jibe with American diplomatic strategy, but when they spoke out clearly and vigorously for peace, Dr. Evatt and Mr. Lie were faithfully complying with their highest obligation.

It might not come amiss to ask whether we wish our policy to contribute to the growth of the United Nations as a universal agency, so that it may still try to construct a lasting world order out of the present chaos, or whether we wish this Government to use the United Nations merely as an instrument to advance our own ends. It is well worth remembering that the persistent attempts of England and France to use the League of Nations for their own national purposes were chiefly responsible for its collapse.

In its record of Palestine, this Government has repeatedly sought to obtain strategic advantage at the expense of the permanent interests of the United Nations.

By the negotiation of an exclusive Western military alliance, outside of the United Nations, as though there were no Article 51 in the Charter, the United States is paving the way for a world division that may destroy the United Nations.

EVENTS which have occurred within the past 10 days have brought into sharp relief the fundamental reason why our foreign policy is relegating the United Nations to the discard. At the very moment that our delegation in Paris was announcing that it would cooperate fully with the smaller countries on the Security Council in finding a solution for the East-West crisis, General Clay's military government in Berlin was telling the press that the attempt of the United Nations to bring about a settlement was "doomed to failure."

After the Western powers had in principle accepted the formula proposed by the smaller countries, and it had been approved by the Soviet Union, the American military authorities in Berlin declared that no such solution was acceptable and announced five sweeping demands upon Moscow of which no intimation had previously been heard.

So long as the high brass is permitted to determine the conduct of our foreign policy, American support for the United Nations may be long on assurances, but it will be short on performance.

There may be much justification for the belief that the Politburo has decided on a course of ruthless expansion, but there is as yet no indication that Russia intends to withdraw from the United Nations.

This session of the Assembly has at least made it clear that so long as all of the major powers continue within the world body there will be ground for hope that peace can be maintained. But that hope will vanish if the United Nations ever becomes the instrument of any one power, or of any coalition of powers.

As President Truman commences his new term of office, it is an appropriate moment for the Administration to reexamine this country's relationship to the United Nations. It should decide whether American interests will be better served by the kind of policy upon which its military advisers have so frequently insisted during the last three years, or by a policy which in act as well as in word is consistently devoted to strengthening the United Nations as a universal agency and as the only means of achieving collective security.

Capehart Denounces Patman

By the United Press

Senator Homer Capehart (R., Ind.) yesterday denounced Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.) as a "demagogue," charging that Patman used the "cheapest sort of petty politics" in attacking the Senate investigation of basing-point price systems.

"It is unfortunate for the United States and for the people," he said of Patman, "to have representatives in Congress so untruthful and so unfair."

Capehart is chairman of a special subcommittee studying the effects on all business of a Federal Trade Commission ruling that the cement industry's basing-point system of pricing is illegal. The decision, upheld by the Supreme Court, was aimed at the industry's practice of absorbing all or part of freight charges and selling its product at the same price all over the country.

The group met with FTC members last night at a closed door session in a downtown hotel.

The Indiana Republican issued his blast after reading into the committee record a statement issued for Patman by the Democratic National Committee a month ago. In it, Patman said the Republican Party, anticipating the election of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and continued GOP control of Congress, set up the Capehart Committee so antitrust laws could be repealed on 30 days' notice. He said the investigation was "inspired" by the steel, cement and other business interests "for their own selfish interests."

Capehart presented a point-by-point denial of the charges.

stand, Donohue quoted from a story about the conference in The Washington Post December 1 as follows:

"'Did I ever talk to you about this case and tell you how to testify?' (Barrett questioning Wallace.)

"Wallace started to answer: 'Yes, the night after Manthos testified . . .' Here, the police chief cut him off, interjecting: 'No, I mean did I ever tell you not to sling any mud?'

"Wallace reflected a moment, then said: 'No, Lieutenant Blick (vice squad head) once told me.'"

Barrett Hits Post

Asked by Donohue if he had been correctly quoted, Barrett replied angrily:

"It's not true—that's a Washington Post quote—the kind I usually get from them."

During his testimony, Barrett declared he has "never told any policeman how to testify" and that Wallace made "an honest mistake" when he said under oath that Barrett had said to "avoid mudslinging."

Crown testified that Barrett asked Wallace several questions during the press conference and said Wallace stated it had been Blick who told him not to sling mud.

The Washington Post

READY TO TESTIFY—Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett and Corporation Counsel Robert D. Wise (right) enter the hearing room

Mosley, recalling the press conference in Barrett's office, said Wallace replied in answer to one of Barrett's questions that he had only two prior conversations with his chief—"the first some months ago and the second the day after Manthos testified."

Mosley said Barrett interrupted to say:

"Don't you mean the day I returned you to uniform?"

"Yes, I guess that was it," Mosley quoted Wallace in reply.

Burch testified that during the conference Barrett asked Wallace how many previous conversations they had and when. Burch testified:

"Wallace said the first time was 4 or 5 months ago in connection with a vice squad case."

"He said the second time was the day after Manthos testified before the ABC, whereupon Barrett stopped him and said, 'You mean it was the day before I returned you to uniform?" Wallace said yes, that was it."

And this was Lewis' version of the same portion of the conference:

"Barrett asked, 'Did I ever talk to you again and tell you how to testify?' Wallace hesitated and then said, 'Yes the night after Manthos testified.'

"Barret interrupted him and said, 'No, I mean did I ever tell you not to sling any mud?' Wallace hesitated again and then said, 'Lieut. Blick once told me.'"

Wallace Questioned Closely

When Wallace, who is now back in uniform and assigned to the Fourth Precinct, was called to the stand, Donohue questioned him closely about the press conference and what questions Barrett had asked him.

"The major asked me, 'Did I tell you about mud-throwing or mud-slinging?'" Wallace testified. "I think I replied that lieutenant Blick told me that."

Q—So you said it was Blick instead of Barrett?

A—To the best of my recollection.

Q—Are you sure anyone told you to avoid mud-slinging?

A—Lieutenant Blick did. I'm positive he did.

Q—Why aren't you equally positive the major did not?

A—I didn't pay that much attention.

Wallace denied talking to Barrett the night after Manthos testified.

Blick Supports Statement

When Blick was called to the stand he admitted he had told Wallace not to sling mud.

"Wallace came to me before the hearing and said he understood 20 or more policemen were going to testify in this case. I told him, 'You have nothing to fear. Just go down there and tell the truth. Just don't get excited and start slinging mud.'"

In answer to a question by Donohue, Blick said by this he did not mean Wallace was to withhold information.

In a closing statement, Donohue said one of the things about the case that had "surprised" him was the "hostility" of Barrett. He spoke highly of Barrett and Blick, but termed Wallace "an enigma."

"He can't be as stupid as he proves himself to be," said Donohue.

In denying the motion for a new hearing, the ABC Board deferred the effective date of the grill's license suspension from December 10 to 15 to give Donohue time to file an appeal with the Commissioners. The suspension is for 53 days. Henry G. David is owner of the grill.

Donohue had announced previously that he would appeal the ABC decision to the Commissioners and, if necessary, to District Court.

Looking to favorable action by Congress, Mason stated that his plan would have the support of "all the drys and as well as some of the wets." He did not say when he would present his plan to the Board of Commissioners.

Linking his new proposal to bring more funds into the District treasury with pay raises for city employes, Mason said:

"It will cost us roughly 5½ million dollars to give our employes the same $330 pay boost granted Federal workers if made retroactive to last July 1. This differentiation in pay within the city just doesn't make sense." He pledged to work for this pay legislation in the coming months.

Tom Hamilton Accepts Pittsburgh Athletic Post

Navy OKs Retirement Effective February 1

Capt. Tom Hamilton called on Secretary of Navy John L. Sullivan yesterday and received permission to retire from the Navy to accept the athletic directorship of the University of Pittsburgh.

Shortly after his conference with Sullivan, Hamilton telephoned his acceptance of the Pitt post to Chancellor Rufus B. Fitzgerald.

While Hamilton's formal application for retirement had not reached high Navy officials, it was said at the department that "there is every indication it will be approved, effective February 1."

Thus Hamilton ends a service career covering 25 years so that he can devote all of his time "to the development of youth" at Pittsburgh.

Hamilton was accompanied by Capt. Frank T. Ward, commandant of midshipmen, when he called on Sullivan.

Caldwell Possible Successor

No mention has been made of a successor to Hamilton at Navy but Capt. Howard Caldwell, faculty football representative of the Naval Academy and a classmate of Hamilton's, is understood to be in line for appointment as director of athletics.

Navy officials said of Hamilton's retirement that he has made a "significant contribution" to Navy athletics as a midshipman, as head of the naval aviation physical fitness program, as head coach of the academy football team and as director of athletics.

In Pittsburgh, word of Hamilton's acceptance of the post there was received as "an early visit from Santa Claus," the Associated Press reported.

Hamilton, 42, will report at Pitt February 1 as director of not only athletics but also Pitt's physical education program.

Significantly, that date coincides with the date that Secretary Sullivan agreed to allow Hamilton to retire.

Hamilton's salary at Pitt reportedly will be about $15,000 under a five-year contract. Contract signing may occur within a fortnight. Hamilton previously was scheduled to be a guest of the Monday Quarterbacks at their banquet in Pittsburgh December 15.

Pitt Re-emphasizing

Presumably the "youth development" at Pitt will embrace the rebuilding of Pitt football teams into something approaching the stature the Panthers held until a decade ago.

Pitt's jubilance ran unbridled when the news of Hamilton's decision was out, the Associated Press reported.

"It's like an early visit from Santa Claus," said Acting Athletic Director Frank Carver. "I'm very, very happy to turn the job over to a man of Hamilton's stature. That's the way we all feel here."

Carver took over after James (Whitey) Hagan resigned last summer under fire. Carver repeatedly rejected efforts to put forth his own candidacy for the job on a permanent basis. He's slated to become graduate manager under the Hamilton regime.

"We are very happy that the university has secured the services of a man of the caliber of Thomas Hamilton," said Chancellor Fitzgerald. "We know that he will become a vital part of the university and of the community as a whole."

Hamilton said:

Sorry to Leave

"It is with regret that I leave the Navy after 25 years of service. I hold the deepest regard and respect for the fighting Navy and for the lads who have battled so valiantly in Navy football.

"A large part of my interest and much of my duty in the Navy has been in the field of athletics. I now feel that I can contribute more to the development of youth by devoting my full time in this great area. I therefore accept with appreciation the splendid opportunity offered at the University of Pittsburgh."

Pitt first offered Hamilton the job last Tuesday. He came here Thursday for an inspection of the university and a press conference. At that time he said he had been approached by Pitt last June but that no commitments had been made.

Hamilton's appointment to Pitt is regarded as clear evidence that the Panthers will undergo a transfusion after years of pernicious athletic anemia, superinduced by a rigid deemphasis program and a robust schedule.

That program introduced in 1938 under the guidance of Hagan saw the Panthers voluntarily accept the Western Conference eligibility rules. Pitt's nine-year courtship of the Big Nine resulted in suicidal schedules, humiliating defeats—and no invitation to join the party as a conference member.

Navy Player Hero Too

Hamilton undertook a three-year coaching tour in 1934 at Navy He returned in 1946 for two years as coach, then he took over as athletic director. His all-time academy coaching record shows 21 victories and 23 defeats.

He's also a Navy football player-hero. His three dropkicks for points after touchdown tied Army 21-21 in 1926.

Exactly 20 years later he coached an inspired Navy team which lost to a great Army eleven, 21-18, by the margin of extra points—and insufficient time for another play.

In World War II, Hamilton headed the Navy's aviation and physical fitness training program. Later he commanded the carrier Enterprise in combat. One of his junior officers was George Sauer, present Navy coach.

TOM HAMILTON
He Goes to Pitt . . .

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

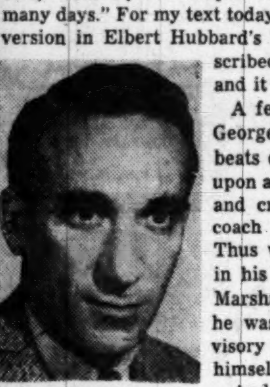
I AM NOT A chapter and verse man but it is written in Eccl. 11:1, "Cast thy bread upon the waters for thou shalt find it after many days." For my text today, though, I am taking the streamlined version in Elbert Hubbard's Book of Epigrams wherein it is inscribed, "Cast your bread upon the waters and it will come back to you buttered."



POVICH

A few years ago, that charitable citizen, George Preston Marshall, in whose breast beats compassion for his fellow man, came upon a wanderer without gainful occupation and created for him a haven as advisory coach of the Redskins at $15,000 a year. Thus was Clark Shaughnessy rehabilitated in his profession, and the magnificence of Marshall's bounty was indisputable because he was bestowing on Shaughnessy, as advisory coach, a post no less than Marshall himself has held for years.

And it came to pass that Shaughnessy attained such recognition as T-formation consultant that he caught on again as advisory coach of the Los Angeles Rams, and when there was the need for a head coach of the Rams, Shaughnessy got the job. And it came to pass also that Shaughnessy brought his Rams to Washington and belted the daylights out of Marshall's Redskins, 41 to 13, and it seemed a poor return for Marshall's largesse.

BUT CLOSER examination reveals that the Rams did not score against the Redskins in the fourth quarter, else it might have been a job for the sweepers. Shaughnessy demonstrated that he, too, is a charitable man, content with running up 41 points against the Redskins, for he put a halter on his Rams in that fourth quarter, extracting his stars from the game, and moving in his substitutes and his substitutes' substitutes.

Thus did the Redskins' escape their most ignominious beating since the uncompassionate Chicago Bears, coached by the unfeeling George Halas, whopped 'em 73 to 0. Halas, like a lot of other people, owed Marshall nothing and poured it on that day in 1940. But in their enthusiasm, which Shaughnessy could not control, his substitutes did create a final gun situation which found the Redskins with the ball on their own 1-foot line, 51 yards from the first down sticks.

Unlike Coach Frank Leahy of Notre Dame, who likes to pull his punches against Navy and thereby stay on Navy's schedule, after his bitter experience of beating Army too much and too often, Shaughnessy was not motivated by any concern over schedule-making. Under the league rules, the Redskins can't drop the Rams however much they might like the idea. In restraining his Rams to 41 points, Shaughnessy was merely doing the nice thing.

THE REDSKINS have been beaten worse, but they never looked worse. Their enthusiasm for the whole business of playing the Rams started leaking late in the second half, with their pass defense a mockery. Bob Waterfield had his choice of eligible receivers unattended by the Redskins and could have stolen time for some income tax figuring, so excellent was his protection.

Sammy Baugh meanwhile was running for his life on his own passing attempts, and as usual there was no imagination in what is supposed to be the Redskins' running attack. On the one occasion in which they did try to get a bit fancy—a pitchout from Baugh to Saenz, they fluffed the whole thing and the Rams recovered a fumble on the Redskins' 16-yard line.

It's surprising that rival clubs even bother to scout the Redskins any more. The pattern of their game has been simple enough over the years. They're all alerted to stop Baugh's passing, and that done, there's little to fear from the Redskins' attempt to run the ball. Jim Castiglia, the only guy who does run it well, gets the brush-off from the coaches and is never sure he is going to be in the line-up.

UNHAPPILY FOR the Redskins, the pro football business has changed in the years since Sammy Baugh dominated the passing scene. The Redskins were out in front in Baugh's early years when only Sid Luckman could throw the ball like himself, but other clubs have since come up with passers like Waterfield, Tommy Thompson, Johnny Clement, Fred Enke and Lujack, and Baugh no longer is a standout.

The worst part of it is, he isn't a hot T-formation quarterback, either. He still throws with the best, but his attempts to hide the ball and manipulate like Luckman and Waterfield and Thompson, are unthrilling and ineffectice, and crippling to a team's running game, even if it were running-minded.

The Redskins, when last seen in Washington, were a pathetic outfit waiting for the final gun on their own 1-foot line, and at the finish that 41-13 licking raised two baffling questions: (1) How did the Rams ever lose five games in the league? and (2) how did the Redskins ever win six?

Moore Easily Beats Amos

Bob Amos, touted Detroit light heavyweight, gave the veteran Archie Moore little more than a good workout last night as Moore punched his way to an easy 10-round decision at Turner's Arena.

Amos, who had lost only one of his 40 professional fights, simply wasn't disposed to make a contest of it and Moore did practically all of what little battling there was. Moore weighed 174, Amos 172.

Moore, crafty St. Louis operator, spent the first five rounds trying to catch the back-pedaling Amos and the last five filling his face with gingery left jabs.

There were no knockdowns and only two spurts in the fight, both by Moore, over which the fans became aroused.

Moore cornered Amos in the seventh, hitting him at will.

In the ninth, Moore once again cornered Amos, hitting him freely but couldn't bring him down.

The card attracted 743 people who paid $1248.18 to see the show.

In the five-round semiwindup, Sonny Bunn, 152½, Washington, pounded out a unanimous decision over Jesse Baker, 152, Roanoke, Va.

Other preliminary results: Scott Richardson, 156, Washington, scored a second-round TKO over Kid Pee Wee, 151, Washington; Rufus Berry, 172, Washington, defeated Jesse James, 168, Washington, in four; Jackie Ford, 143, Washington, stopped Slugger White, 143, Washington, in the fourth round of a scheduled five.

Hoyas Play Fort Belvoir

The Georgetown Hoyas, liberally spiced with veterans and string-bean sophomores, open their basketball season tonight with a tune-up game against Fort Belvoir at Catholic University gym.

Coach Elmer Ripley's 1948 squad will take the court against the soldiers enhanced by a trio of tall rookies who should provide the balance necessary to prevent the midseason collapse which overtook the Hoyas last year under the pressure of a prolonged Western tour.

One of the newcomers, Center John Mazziotta, 6 feet 5 inches, of New York City, has been named to the starting five for tonight's game. He'll be joined by Ripley's twin-scoring punch, Tommy O'Keefe and Ray Corley. At the forwards will be Joe Culhane, switched from center, and junior Vince Leddy. Danny Supkis, 6 feet 7 inches, and John Kelly, 6 feet 3 inches, the other two elongated sophomores, should also see action tonight.

With a Madison Square Garden date against N.Y.U. set for Saturday, Coach Ripley traipsed up to New York last night to watch the Violets perform against Colgate.

Collins Ready To Transfer Boston Yanks

Boston, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Owner Ted Collins admitted today that if he can find a new home for his Yanks, he would transfer his National Football League franchise from Boston.

To date he's found no one willing to adopt his club, he said, and he might have to stay here another year.

"Right now we're homeless," he said ruefully, despite the fact that his team staged the league's greatest upstet of the season Sunday by humbling the Eastern Division Champion Philadelphit Eagles, 37 to 14.

"Don't Know Where We'll Be"

"I don't know where we'll be next season. Maybe I'll come back to Boston and take another chance. We just can't click here, though. I want to try somewhere else."

But just because he wants to quit Boston, Collins isn't giving up his franchise.

"I will not go out of football," he said grimly. Collins lost $220,000 this year—making it an $880,000 total loss since he took charge.

Usually Less Than 10,000

Not once this season did the Yanks draw enough fans to make the guarantee of $15,000 paid visiting teams. Usually less than 10,000 fans go out to see them play.

At the moment, Collins said, he was busy negotiating with three Eastern cities which he wouldn't name. Further, he'' have to get permission from the league to shift the franchise. That, he said, seemed easy.

Among other things on the Collins' agenda was the coaching problem. Maurice J. (Clipper) Smith has had the unenviable task this season but his contract has expired. The guess was he was on his way out.

Goode for Washington

'Skins Slash Squad by Four Players, Sign No. 1 Draftee

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Casually, as though Sunday's 41-13 wrecking job by the Los Angeles Rams had nothing to do with it, the Washington Redskins yesterday brought the ax down on the necks of four players.

Put on the waiver list, and due for release if nobody claims them, were two backs and two linemen: Fullback John Henry Hollar, former Appalachian State player obtained from the Chicago Cardinals; Halfback George Cheverko, a Fordham graduate, bought from the New York Giants; Tackle Carl Butkus, former George Washington star, who was picked up after his release from the New York Yankees; and Tackle Weldon Edwards, drafted from Texas Christian in '47 and never lived up to his advance notices.

Much more important, in the Redskin management's eyes, at least, was the announcement of their No. 1 selection in the National Football League's 1948 collegiate draft.

He is Halfback Bob Goode of Texas A. & M., picked by Redskin Owner George Marshall when the N. F. L. staged a secret one-round drawing in Pittsburgh two weeks ago. The regular draft meeting, at which the 10-team league will take the remainder of its choices from the collegiate ranks, will be held December 20 in Philadelphia.

Goode, a 210-pounder who soars to 6-feet-four and is just 21, yesterday sealed his 1949 pact with the Redskins in person. He flew into Washington in time to witness Sunday's game, and declared himself still willing to play for Washington.

Goode is the first of the Redskins' No. 1 choices in the regular draft to be signed since 1943. Mike Micka of Colgate joined the 'Skins that year.

Selection of Goode, who will perform for the West team against the East in the New Year's Shrine Bowl, is in accordance with the Redskins' newborn desire for versatility in their players. Goode has averaged 55 minutes a game for the Aggies all year.

He comes from a team with a '48 record of nine losses and one tie, the last a 14-14 deadlock with Texas, but he needs to make no apologies for his own play. His best day was against Southern Methodist, when he scored once on a 42-yard pass play and hurled to Andy Hillhouse for the Aggies' other touchdown as they lost, 20-14.

Against Baylor, which beat the Aggies by another 20-14 count, Goode scored once on a short line buck and pitched to Charley Wright for 39 yards and another touchdown.

The Chicago Bears named Goode as their No. 1 draft choice at the 1947 meeting but the selection was voided when he found to be ineligible for the draft at that time.

He was an all-around track man at Texas A. & M. His best time for the 100-yard dash was 9.8.

Irwin Death Probed; Fight May Be Cause

Dallas, Dec. 6 (AP).—Police today obtained a court order to let them examine hospital records in the death of W. H. (Hi) Erwin, 56, former ball player and umpire.

Erwin died at the Methodist Hospital here Saturday. Police entered the case today after Erwin's attending physician reported he believed Erwin died from internal injuries reecived in a fight about two months ago.

At the suggestion of Detective Capt. Will Fritz, Justice of the Peace W. E. Richburg opened a court of inquiry, and ordered an autopsy performed on Erwin's body.

Fritz said that among those who talked to police was Art Shires, 42-year-old former big league ball player. Shires now operates a Dallas shrimp house.

Shires was quoted by a Dallas news reporter as saying he had a fight with Erwin on October 3, but that he had been told Erwin's death was the result of an illness, not a fight.

Shires was 13 years in big league baseball. He played with the Chicago White Sox, Washington Senators, and St. Louis Cardinals.

For Blood Clot

Collision With Coan Causes Operation on Lou Boudreau

Cleveland, Dec. 6 (AP).—Manager Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians is recovering from a minor operation that removed a blood clot from his right side.

The operation was performed last Monday, the Tribe's front office said today, in Boudreau's home town at Harvey, Ill., to clear up an injury he received in a collision with Gil Coan during a game with the Washington Nats, August 6.

The clot caused him considerable pain and he was benched for a while. Physicians expect no ill effects and Boudreau is up and around even though he must have the incision drained twice a day at Harvey.

The Indians said Boudreau hopes to meet President Bill Veeck at Minneapolis the middle of this week to attend the minor league meeting if his operation is cleared up by then.

Gilmer Makes Trip

For the first time this year Harry Gilmer, the Redskins' expensive rookie who has been in six plays all year, will travel with the team when it closes the '48 campaign in New York this weekend.

Gilmer will merely "observe," however. His damaged right leg is in a walking cast.

Savold Disqualified, Woodcock Wins

'Low-Blow' Rule Brings Protests

By Robert Musel

London, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—In a fight that produced international controversy instead of a challenger for Joe Louis, Bruce Woodcock of England won on a fourth-round foul over veteran Lee Savold of Paterson, N. J., tonight before a sell-out crowd of 10,700 at Harringay Arena.

Referee Sam Russell disqualified Savold at 1:40 of the fourth round after a right to the groin sent the European and British Empire heavyweight champion writhing to the canvas flat on his back.

Woodcock had landed only one solid punch during the bout, which had been scheduled for 10 rounds, but he had suffered punishment that made him bleed profusely from the nose and mouth. And he had been floored for a count of eight in the third round.

Bill Daly, Savold's manager, leaped into the ring and shouted: "This is murder!" He yelled to ringside reporters: "Woodcock is the biggest faker in prize fight history. The guy was all set up for a knockout. and he goes down whining from a light punch."

Apparently many of the fans agreed with Daly, for when Woodcock's hand was raised in victory in midring he was greeted with mingled boos and cheers. The crowd had paid $120,000 to witness the fiasco, which had been expected to produce a possible challenger for Louis.

Referee Sam Russell said the punch was low and "there was no other decision I could make.

"If Woodcock had got up unhurt I would probably have warned Savold but with Wood-

London, Dec. 6 (AP).—Bill Daly, manager of Lee Savold who lost today on a disqualification to British Light-Heavy King, Bruce Woodcock, said in the dressing room after the bout that the punch that lost the American the fight was not low.

"In any case," he said, "there was no power in it to cause Woodcock any pain. He wears a protectine belt, doesn't he, the same as Lee does?" I'll show you what you can do when you're wearing one of those."

Daly turned to Savold and said, "Get off your dressing gown and your trunks."

Savold did so. And to show the dressing room, full of British and American sports writers, the kind of protection given by belts, Daly waded into Savold with both fists and both feet.

"Now, how much was Woodcock hurt?" asked Daly.

Special to The Post

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 6.—Led by All-America Forward Dick Dickey, who tossed in 15 points, North Carolina State's Wolfpack opened its Southern Conference basketball schedule here tonight with a decisive 66-37 win over George Washington's Colonials.

Coach Everett Chase's shotmakers went to work early in the contest and as Dickey pumped in seven field goals during the first 12 minutes of play, State amassed a 36-17 lead at halftime and won going away with all of Case's 10 lettermen and one freshman seeing action.

Dickey's one-hander in the first 30 seconds sent State off to a 2-0 lead. Forward Warren Cartier added a free toss and it was 3-0 after one minute of play. George Washington's Phil McNiff got a field goal for a 3-2 count, but from here on it was all State.

Cartier's four consecutive free throws and Dickey's rebound bucket put the Wolfpack in the van by 9-2 after three minutes. Dickey and Cartier added five more between them and G. W. picked up only a free throw to make it 14-3 after seven minutes.

Led by 24-3

State's airtight defense went into action, holding the Colonials in check until the Wolfpack margin was 24-3 after nine minutes. Dickey dropped in three straight buckets and G. W.'s Cantwell made one to put the count at 30-5 with only 12 minutes gone.

George Washington couldn't close the gap and at halftime the Wolfpack was leading 36-17.

Dickey's 15 points was high for the Wolfpack.

Cantwell led the George Washington attack with 10 points. He did a great job defensively, but was held in check by Guard Bubas, who guarded him closely. Three GW men fouled out of the rough contest. Johnnie Moffatt and Ray Adler went out on fouls midway in the second half and Guard Ray Shapiro left on fouls with two minutes to play.

Black Undergoes Operation on Brain Today

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Pitcher Don Black of the Cleveland Indians will undergo a "dangerous" brain operation tomorrow morning to remove "a weak spot in a blood vessel," it was announced today.

Dr. Spencer Braden, brain specialist who is attending the Cleveland hurler, said he will perform the operation at Charity Hospital for the removal of an aneurysm, which he described as "a weak spot in a blood vessel."

Braden said he believed the aneurysm caused the cerebral hemorrhage which Black suffered in a game with the St. Louis Browns last September.

Dr. Braden would not predict the outcome of tomorrow's surgery except to say it was "dangerous."

They're Dreaming Up Truman Bowl Jan. 1

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

PRESIDENT TRUMAN, who went through an unbeaten, untied season in his only contest last month, can now have a New Year's Day bowl game named after him, if he wants.

Several Washington businessmen, smitten by the idea of a post-season game and anxious to raise funds for "any worthwhile charity," are knee deep in plans for a January 1 scrap in Washington which would pit an all-star pro team against an all-star college club.

The group, headed by Al Lockhart, an official of the United States Automobile Association, last night said the game will definitely be played and they'd like to call the affair, which they hope will be staged annually, the "Truman Bowl."

A delegation representing the group is expected to call on Mr. Truman in the White House today seeking permission to use his name or his endorsement of the game.

"IF THE PRESIDENT permits the use of his name, we'll be very happy," Lockhart, managing director of the game, said. "If he doesn't, the game will be played under a different name."

Sam Tamburo, All-American end from Penn State, heads the list of college seniors who have already accepted invitations to play in the affair. Buddy Young, of the New York Yankees; Bob Chappuis, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, and Marion Motley and Otto Graham of the Cleveland Browns top the list of pros who'll compete, according to Lockhart.

The "Truman Bowl" Committee has asked Paul Brown, coach of the Cleveland Browns, to coach the pro all-stars. Jim Tatum, of Maryland; Ed Hurt, of Morgan, and Herman Hickman, of Yale, have been invited to guide the college all-stars. None has either accepted or declined yet.

"BY MATCHING 22 of the leading pro grid players against 24 college all-stars, we hope to raise at least $15,000 for charity," Lockhart said.

Plans for the game are way past the preliminary stage. Orders for tickets and posters have already been placed and they will be printed as soon as the official name for the game has been determined.

Telegrams have been sent to over 100 college football coaches, white and Negro, requesting coaches to submit a list of seniors who would be available for the game.

TWO GEORGETOWN PLAYERS, End George Benigini and Fullback Jack O'Connor, wired their acceptance through their coach, Jack Hagerty. Pennsylvania Halfback Al Sica and Tackle Jack Conway are available, according to George Munger, Penn coach. Fordham Halfback Frank Sullivan has also accepted, the "Truman Bowl" Committee said.

Recreation Tourney Starts Dec. 27

By Sy Fishbein
Post Reporter

Looking for a way to keep in trim during the hristmas holidays? The D. C. Recreation Department again offers an ideal way this year with its mammoth, citywide basketball tournament which will begin December 27.

All you have to do is get up a team of your own size and experience, and bring it to the nearest playground. As in previous years no entry fee or equipment is required.

Boys' teams will be divided into 90, 105, and 120-pound teams and into unlimited restricted or unlimited unrestricted classifications. Anyone with experience on high, prep, or college teams will have to compete in the unrestricted tournament which will be limited to teams participating in the Neighborhood Centers program.

This year the Department takes official note of feminine athletic prowess. Girls' teams are also invited and will be divided into the Junior Division for girls under 14, and the Senior Division for girls between 14 and 17.

All entries must be turned in by December 18. The games will be played at Langley Junior High and at Tech.

Armory Boxing

The National Guard Armory amateur boxing show, due this Friday evening, has swelled to nine bouts with the addition of four more bouts yesterday. Most attractive on the card is the five-round rematch of two local 126-pound amateur champions, Lester Allison of the Guard and Al Gooding of the Olympic Club.

Other amateurs of past, present and perhaps future note who'll box Friday night are Pat Thomas, Ralph Meador, Charlie Hebron, Roland Randall, Jimmy Binns, Herbie Stone and Jimmy Caraway. Tickets will be 80 cents and $1.30.

Arlington League

Arlington, too, wants a basketball league in the county this winter. Toward that end, the Arlington Recreation Athletic Association, a nonprofit group of about 50 citizens, will hold a meeting Thursday night at 8 at the Recreation Department, 3700 Lee highway. As the same meeting, Bernie Lieb, a member of the basketball committee and a former Catholic University hoop star, will discuss plans for the formation of a school for Arlington basketball officials and coaches. Prospective students and team sponsors are invited to attend.

YMCA Basketball

The Boys' YMCA of Washington, forming a basketball league for boys of junior high school age, announces that there's lots of room left in the league for most teams. Mr. Carl at NAtional 8259, ext. 48, would like to hear from anyone interested.

Jackson Gets His Way

The Boxing Commission yesterday told Stonewall Jackson he could fight Sonny Boy West any way he wanted to, as long as he didn't violate any rules.

Jackson and West meet in a 12-round bout at Uline Arena tomorrow night for the District lightweight title. West scored an eight-round knockout over Jackson last month.

Stonewall, a weaving, bobbing, clowning performer, changed his style for the last West fight at the behest of the commission which thought he was too rough and used illegal tactics.

He told the commission yesterday that h. plans to return to his normal style Wednesday night and the boxing solons gave him the green light, but cautioned him against fouling.

Scolari Left Behind by Caps

The Caps will have to make out without Freddie Scolari again as they move into Indianapolis tonight for a game against the Jets.

Freddie's left ankle was in bad enough shape yesterday to keep him from joining the Caps on the road.

The road trip includes stops in Minneapolis against the Lakers tomorrow night and Chicago where the Caps will meet the St. Louis Bombers on Friday. Then home on Saturday night for another bout with the Bombers.

Chisox Send Lupien to Coast

Minneapolis, Dec. 6 (AP).—The first of many expected deals out of the annual gathering of the minor baseball leagues came up today.

The deal sent Tony Lupien, first baseman for the Chicago White Sox last year, to Sacramento, Calif., of the Pacific Coast League. White Sox officials said it was a cash deal, but declined to name the sum.

Frank Genovese Knoxville Manager

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Frank (Chick) Genovese, outfielder and part-time manager of the Minneapolis club of the American Association last season, today was named 1949 manager of the Knoxville Smokies of the Tri-State League.

Ariel Gift, Big Elm Second, 3d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 6.—Paying a mere $2.60 win mutuel—the smallest pay-off of the meeting—H. G. Bedwell's Leamour won as the backing suggested, with ease and by five lengths in the featured Babe Sharkey Purse.

Mrs. Virginia McKiney's Ariel Gift was second and three lengths in advance of the Flamingo Farm's Big Elm. Leamour, a son of Bull Lea but never accused of being a second Whirlaway, was capably and carefully handled by Apprentice Willie Downs.

Although a bright sun and a cloudless sky made for a beautiful day here in the mountains, the track was just as heavy and rugged as it has been since the sport shifted here. With a chance to dry somewhat, heavy rain last night and early this morning kept the oval fairly oozing moisture.

Second Win of Meeting

Leamour, in wining for the second time here and the fourth time this year, turned in the buggy-horse time of 2:06.3/5 for the mile and an eighth.

Young Downs, who had been beaten on two Bedwell-saddled favorites in previous races today, rode with the greatest of confidence aboard Leamour.

While Wary Flight and Blue Egret alternated in setting and forcing the pace, Downs kept his mount in the center of the track and well off that struggle.

Leamour Moves Up

Going to the far turn, the pace makers wilted and Big Elm shot up to take over. However, Downs moved with Leamour on the outside, came around the leaders gradually and, in the parlance of the backstretch, "went on about his business."

Ariel Gift closed boldly to take the place money from the tiring Big Elm.

Two jockeys were given five-day suspensions for rough riding, J. Doggett and R. Powers in the first and second races. Powers was aboard Punxsy when the filly fell in the fifth race and he escaped injury.

Citation 'Horse of Year'

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—To the surprise of no one who follows horse racing, Citation today was named "Horse of the Year" in the annual poll conducted by Turf and Sports Digest, Baltimore racing publication.

The Calumet Comet was adjudged the outstanding racer of 1948 by 161 of the 163 sports writers who participated in the poll. Winners of top honors in other divisions of the poll were: 2-year-old colt or gelding; J. M. Roebling's Blue Peter; 2-year-old filly; Maine Chance Farm's Myrtle Charm; 4-year-olds and up: Shannon II, the Australian-bred horse.

Ray Mathews Tops Scorers With 78 Points

Ray Mathews, Clemson's sophomore halfback, yesterday won the Southern Conference individual point-making championship.

Mathews scored three touchdowns Saturday in Clemson's 20-0 victory over The Citadel to boost his scoring total for the season to 13 touchdowns—78 points.

Trailing Mathews with 66 points was Choo-Choo Charlie Justice, North Carolina's All-America tailback. Bill Gregus, Wake Forest sophomore back, was third with 54 points. Fourth was Bob Cox, North Carolina's place-kicking end, with 51.

Clemson was the only undefeated and untied club in the conference—Clemson's first season since 1900 without a defeat or tie. The Tigers won 10 games.

Four teams still have post-season appointments. Wake Forest plays Baylor in the Dixie Bowl at Birmingham, Ala.; William and Mary faces Oklahoma A. and M. in the Delta Bowl at Memphis, Tenn.; North Carolina battles Oklahoma in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans, La., and Clemson and Missouri tangle in the 'Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla. All are New Year's afternoon contests.

Nats' Vollmer Tops Fielder

Clyde Vollmer, who was sold to the Nats at the end of last season by the Syracuse Chiefs, had the best fielding average of any International League outfielder, acording to official statistics announced released yesterday.

Vollmer made only two errors in 293 chances for an average of .993. He beat out Hal Bamberger of Jersey City who wound up with .989. Vollmer turned in a handsome batting job for the Chiefs, too, with an average of .289, 104 runs batted in and 32 homers.

Headquarters Marines Win

The Headquarters Marine Corps last night swamped the Fort Myer, North Post basketball team 72-46 in a game played at Henderson Hall. It was the sevenh win for the Marines in nine games. Frank Gainy was the high Marine with 22 points.

Fordham Signs Danowski Again

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Ed Danowski, head football coach at Fordham University since 1946, has been signed to continue in the position for 1949. The signing of the one-year contract was announced tonight by John Coffey, graduate manager of athletics at the Bronx school.

Woodcock Wins on Foul

ock lying in agony on the anvas I had no alternative but o stop the fight."

Savold, who had been warned fter throwing a low blow at the nd of the third round, explained in the dressing room that he had just landed a left to the body and that as he started a right to the same spot, Woodcock lunged in and impaled himself "low" on the punch.

The 32-year-old blond admitted, "The punch landed astray, but it had no steam. Woodcock didn't appear to be hurt by it until he heard the crowd yelling 'low.' Then he decided to fall."

In most American States a fighter cannot lose on a foul although he can be disqualified for repeated fouling. The no-foul rule in the United States was written into the codes after the sorry performances of "Faintin' Phil" Scott of England and Max Schmeling of Germany in claiming foul victories in American rings.

Savold appeared to be hammering rapidly toward certain victory when the disqualification came. Woodcock landed several left jabs and one hard right near the bell in the first round, but in that session, Savold's jabs and ripping uppercuts had the Empire champ bleeding from the nose. Lee's jabs brought blood to Woodcock's mouth in the second round.

In the third round it seemed that Woodcock would be knocked out when a one-two punch to the chin dropped him for a count of eight. Woodcock, nervous throughout, fearfully covered up at the beginning of the fourth, and Savold followed him around the ring, unmindful of Woodcock's mild pawing, until the low punch ended the pursuit.

Brenchley Joins Lions

Edgar (Chirp) Brenchley, a former whiz with the old Washington Lions of the Eastern League and more recently a Lion scout, has been put back in harness by Coach Frank Beisler for tonight's game with the New Haven Ramblers at Uline Arena.

Benchley has been fitted into the forward line that includes Win Mousseau opposite him on the wings and Davey McGuire in the center.

The Lions have been closing in on the Ramblers. Ewamped, 9-0, here early in the season. The Lions traveled up to New Haven recently and cut the margin down to 4-2.

Denver Loses To St. John's

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Don Noonan, sub forward, sank a long, lobbing shot in the final 15 seconds of an overtime period to give St. John's of Brooklyn a 55-53 victory over Denver University tonight at Madison Square Garden. Denver led at the half, 27-24.

Georgetown Boys Defeat Bladensburg

Georgetown Branch, Boys Club of Washington, playing in its home gym defeated Bladensburg Boys Club, 42-28, in a 105-pound basketball game last night. On the same court, Bladensburg defeated Cahills, 30-10, in the 150-pound division.

The Georgetown Boys Club is looking for several games to fill up its schedule. Competition is needed in the 80, 90, 105, 120,135, and 150-pound classes. Call Joe Branzell, MIchigan 2122.

Mrs. Morgan Sets District Rifle Record

Mrs. Ruth Morgan of the Greenbelt Gun Club No. 1 team set a new District record of 287 last night as she paced her team to a 1383-1340 margin over Kensington Rifle Club in the Maryland Rifle League.

In other matches the Maryland Frosh tripped the Pee Gees, 1339 to 1315, and National Rifle Club No. 2 defeated Greenbelt No. 2, 1315 to 1296.

Quantico Whips MCI Five, 61-31

The Quantico Marines evened their basketball record at all last night as they swamped Marine Corps Institute, 61-31, at Henderson Hall. Ci Waldrop, former Navy star, led the victors with 10 points. High for the night was M. C. I.'s Bill Bushman with 14.

Economists Differ on Size of U.S. Profits

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Two Harvard economists disagreed on the size of profits of American corporations.

One, Seymour Harris, recommended to the Flanders Subcommittee of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report, that a return to the wartime corporate tax level of 60 per cent, instead of the present 40 per cent, might be beneficial as a brake on inflation.

The other, Sumner H. Schlichter, declared that corporation profits are not nearly so high as advertised. They have been fooling themselves, their stockholders, employes and the public, by overstating their profits, he said. In the last three years they have overstated their profits by 16.4 billion dollars, by appraising their inventories at replacement instead of original cost, and other similar errors, he said. They also count the rises in replacing plant and equipment as a profit, which shouldn't be done.

In reply, his colleague, Harris, said: "My considered judgment is that profits are too high," and then added: "Our system would stand a much better chance of survival if the incomes of business and professional groups, going to a relatively small part of the population, did not reach 50 to 60 billion dollars, or more than one-quarter of the total income."

Harris urged that the committee give thought not only to corporate profits, but also to the profits of "unincorporated business and professional income."

As an example of professional incomes being too high, he cited the medical profession. Since 1939, he said, the income of the medical profession has increased 200 per cent, although the number receiving it has increased only 5 per cent.

Harris said that two ways are open to "stop the inflation." One is through strict controls—price controls, allocations, etc. He favored instead of these, however, the "fiscal policy."

That he explained, is to "tax more, and in so far as broad national objectives allow, spend less.

Esteem Freedom, Wiley Urges

To keep the United States the "home of the brave and especially the land of the free," we must have a sense of appreciation of what we have, Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) said last night.

The Senator gave the principal address at the eighty-third birthday celebration of the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants at 2600 16th st. nw.

Warning that we must remain constantly alert to prevent a repetition of Pearl Harbor, he pointed to "parlor pinks, as more to feared than outright Communists. I have confidence that Mr. (J. Edgar) Hoover can take care of them."

Dr. John Clagett Proctor, association president, reminded the guests that cattle grazed on the site of their banquet

Search Party Reaches California Plane Wreck

Salinas, Calif., Dec. 6 (U.P.).—A Navy search party today reached the spot where a chartered civilian plane crashed and burned against a steep mountainside near here, and began removing bodies.

Navy officers said the bodies were so badly burned that they were unable to determine the number killed. None could be identified immediately.

Earlier, it was reported that "five or six men" were killed when the ship smashed into the fog-shrouded mountain about 18 miles east of here.

In Burbank, Calif., A. H. Wilson reported that his 18 year-old stepson, Dale McArthur, and "probably four other sailors" took off from Burbank yesterday afternoon to return to their base at Yerba Buena Island in San Francisco Bay. He believed it was their plane that crashed.

Bodies of GM Executive, Two Employes Are Found

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 6 (AP).—The bodies of a General Motors executive and two women employes were found today in their wrecked private airplane.

They had been missing since leaving Jamestown, N. Y., Saturday afternoon.

The victims were W. . Blanchard 48, general manager of GM's aero products division at Dayton, Ohio; Vivian Johnson, 29, and Betty Charles, 28, both of Dayton.

The plane crashed in a cornfield 10 miles west of Columbus and 60 miles east of Dayton, apparently as Blanchard attempted a forced landing.

20 Deaths Attributed to Storm in Midwest and West

Chicago, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—At least 20 persons died in a near-blizzard in the Midwest and other weekend storms across the Nation, a checkup showed today.

The whirlwind Midwest storm was followed by cold, clear weather, but in the South rain-swollen rivers were on the rampage, forcing families from their homes and blocking highway travel.

The snowstorm claimed 18 lives, while two died in an Oregon bus crash attributed to the weather.

At Newton, Ga., flood waters of the Flint River cascaded through the downtown section and lapped at the doors of the courthouse.

Authorities said Newton residents refused to get excited and sat on their front porches watching the water rise. All roads to the city except one were blocked.

Flood waters began receding in North Carolina and Virginia, but the James River still was 15 feet over flood stage at Richmond and some families were evacuated over the weekend. Ten bridges were washed out in Virginia.

The Midwest storm, which iced highways, tore down power and telephone lines and caused extensive damage, blew itself out in Canada.

Weather forecasters here said the only snow still falling was in the northern Great Lakes region and northern Minnesota.

Clear, cold weather moved in, dropping the mercury to 2 below zero in some parts of the Dakotas and to 16 above elsewhere in the Midwest. Below-freezing temperatures spread as far south as Oklahoma, the Texas Panhandle, Arkansas, and even Vicksburg, Miss.

Winds that reached as high as 69 miles an hour in Wisconsin accompanied the snowstorm.

Democrats Set Victory Dinner Here on Feb. 24

The Democratic Party yesterday picked February 24 as the date for the Jefferson-Jackson dinner in Washington to celebrate the Truman-Barkley victory in the November election.

Senator J. Howard McGrath, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, predicted the 1949 victory dinners will set a new record.

The Jackson-Jefferson dinners, which cost up to $100 a plate, are intended to raise party funds.

McGrath said recently the party wound up the 1948 presidential campaign with a deficit but, since the Truman-Barkley ticket won, he wasn't worrying about it.

Slayers to Learn New Date of Execution Today

Two convicted murderers are due to learn at 10 a. m. today when they must die in the electric chair for the fatal shooting of a Washington druggist.

Jesse James Patton, 23, and Reginald J. Wheeler, 28—who secured a stay, their twelfth, only 21 minutes before the hour set for execution last Friday—yesterday received a 24-hour delay in resentencing.

Judge Holtzoff explained that the stay granted Patton and Wheeler Friday does not end until 10 a. m. today. Holtzoff said he would delay resentencing until the stay expired.

Civil Service Testing Program to Be Topic Of Hearing Set Today

Civil Service examinations will be the subject of a hearing today before the Senate Service Committee. For one thing, Chairman Langer will suggest that the Government supply typewriters to applicants who take typing and steno tests. All phases of the examining program also will be looked into.

WHITE HOUSE: Two probable appointments to the White House staff: Jonathan Daniels, the North Carolina writer and publisher, who helped the President during the recent campaign, and David Lloyd of the Democratic National Committee staff.

NOTES: E. M. May is the new employe member of VA's board of efficiency rating appeals. His alternates are Howard L. Lee and George L. Holland . . . The National Rural Letter Carriers Association is conducting a worthy project. It is checking its members' equipment expense, which must be double the prewar costs . . . At the Army Medical Center, Alfred R. Freysz received a cash award for an economy suggestion . . . At REA, the first Negro electrical engineer has been appointed. He's Joseph F. Douglas, a 22-year-old Air Force veteran, who was graduated from Purdue.

VETERANS: Fram my mail and phone it's all too evident that a large number of people are interested in the new method of selecting veterans for Federal jobs as proposed to the Hoover Commission. The plan was revealed here Sunday. To the many people who are seeking additional information, details and developments, all I can say is this—I'll try to report them as they develop.

LOYALTY: One of the unfortunate results of the employe loyalty program is the lingering suspicion and discrimination against innocent employes who are investigated at length by the FBI and cleared.

In any number of cases, agencies have canceled jobs and promotions for people who were found to be innocent by the loyalty inquiries. For instance, an employe involved in a recent case was all set to be transferred to a better job in another agency.

The FBI, however, stepped in with a full-scale investigation of him because he once worked in an office with a Communist. Both the report and his agency loyalty board cleared him, but the agency he was to transfer torefused to take him merely because he was investigated.

The Federal Personnel Council has studied this problem and it has come up now with what it hopes will be a solution. It has recommended a "policy" in handling the cases of employes who are cleared. By and large, it urges that such cases be handled by high-level officials who should be sympathetic with the cleared workers.

The council statement said in part: "We regard it as a moral obligation of all concerned to see that entirely innocent and loyal employes are adequately safeguarded against such inquiry."

JOB NEWS: An exam for veterinarian jobs with beginning salaries of $3727 will be announced soon by Civil Service . . . A test for appointments to the school of nursing at St. Elizabeth's Hospital here also is in the works. The three-year course will start next October . . . Nearly 400 veterans were rated eligible in the messenger exam given on October 18.

Also to be announced soon is a test for substitute railway postal clerk. This exam will be limited to veterans and those temporary and war service clerks who have been in their jobs since August 28, 1947. The jobs pay $1.39 an hour and there are openings in each of the 48 States and Territories.

About 61,000 persons applied for the previous exam, some 3000 from this city. District applicants will have the choice of having their names placed on the Maryland or Virginia lists.

AN OPEN LETTER TO HERBERT HOOVER

Dear Mr. Hoover: Your august committee
Seems composed of a pretty good bunch.
So won't you please reorganize
Federal workers' time for lunch?

Did you ever try within a half hour
To grab a noonday snack?
Yet that's what a lot of us must do——
Rush out—gobble—and back!

Of course if we were supervisors
We wouldn't have to worry.
Their time's their own as a privileged class;
They never eat in a hurry.

Our lighting's inefficient;
Ventilation is deficient,
When our health breaks down they make a test;
But not of the causes—only our chest!

We don't expect the special privilege
Of the supervisory bunch,
We're asking only for a reasonable time——
Say three-quarters of an hour, at least, for lunch.

A 73-year-old woman was killed early yesterday when she was struck by a streetcar while on her way to early mass.

She was Mrs. Annie Whalen O'Connell, of 1207 Decatur st. nw. Just 11 years ago to the month, her husband, David J. O'Connell, had died of pneumonia resulting from shock he had suffered several days earlier when he was struck by an automobile at New Hampshire ave. and M st. nw., the family said.

Yesterday's accident occurred on Georgia ave. near Decatur st. nw. shortly after 6 a. m. Mrs. O'Connell's family said she was on her way to the Church of the Nativity to attend services there. They said it appeared as though she remembered something she had forgotten at home, while she was crossing the street, and had turned around into the path of the streetcar.

The Rev. John B. Roeder of St. Gabriel's was called and administered the last rites of the Catholic Church. Mrs. O'Connell was pronounced dead at the scene.

Police listed the operator of the streetcar as Walter T. Weaver, 62, of 2 Sycamore rd., Takoma Park, Md.

A native of Swoope, Va., Mrs. O'Connell had lived in Washington for about 38 years. She is survived by seven daughters, four sons and 14 grandchildren.

Traffic Ticket Adjusted for Blood Donor

A motorist, who parked his car temporarily while he went indoors to wake someone up in time to go to work, and another, who was delayed while giving a blood donation, were among 91 motorists for whom traffic tickets were adjusted last week.

Eugene C. Baker of 2114 N st. nw., was warned for parking less than 40 feet from an intersection, after he explained he had stopped to get someone up for work, police said. John Eubank of Derwood, Md., was warned for parking overtime after he explained he had been delayed while donating blood, according to police.

Tickets were canceled for the following motorists because of diplomatic immunity: Reuben J. Gordon, Chilean Embassy, parked in alley; Antonio Vega, Chilean Embassy, parked in alley; Chen S. Li, Chinese Embassy, obstructing driveway; Helen M. Brownlee, Austanding from 4 to 6:30 p. m." standing frfom 4 to 6:30 p. m." zone; Svea Erikson, Swedish Embassy, parked in a "no parking from 4 to 6 p. m." zone; Sakir Koralturk, Turkish Embassy, parked in a "no parking from 7 to 9:30 a. m." zone.

Meyer Asks Funds To Aid Juvenile Delinquency Fight

Declaring there is a need for reawkening public interest in juvenile delinquency, the National Probation and Parole Association yesterday appealed for funds to continue and expand its work.

"For more than a quarter of a century," Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post and member of the association's board, said "the association has been working intelligently and successfully to further the scope and effectiveness of the Nation's probation system.

"Through its efforts," he declared, "probation almost everywhere, both juvenile and adult, has been strengthened, thereby helping to bring to thousands of children and adults the enlightened consideration their problems require."

Checks should be made out to the association and addressed to Eugene Meyer, The Washington Post, Washington 4 D. C.

New Children's Hospital Expected by Next Summer

Construction of the new Children's Hospital is expected to begin next summer, Rear Admiral C. R. Train, U. S. N. (retired), chairman of the hospital's ways and means committee, announced yesterday.

Admiral Train, who served as chairman of the annual meeting of the hospital's board of directors yesterday in the absence of Acting Board President James H. Lemon, said that final plans are being drawn up.

The new institution, to be erected on the present site of the hospital at 13th and W sts. nw., will be financed by $1,300,000 gained from a building campaign, and $598,000 of Federal funds, he said.

In presenting Lemon's annual report, he revealed that financial operations of the hospital during the past year will result in an expected net loss of $75,000. The 1947 loss was $78,000.

Lemon's report cited "ballooning costs" and higher salaries, increased food and supplies prices—as overriding the hospital's income. Contracts with the Health Department, Community Chest and group hospitalization are now more equitable, but "not sufficient for our needs," the report said.

Dr. Montgomery Blair, jr., director told the board and hospital corporation members that "from the standpoint of operations, financially, the picture is discouraging."

Although changes have been made and economies instituted, the overall results have not been satisfactory, he said. He pointed to salary increases, extensive repairs to the building and equipment, and rising costs as the reasons for the $75,000 deficit, most of which has already been acquired.

Dr. Blair also said three new clinics had been added to the outpatient department, and that the hospital's research foundation will have approximately $50,000 to spend after the first of the year.

In making the report of the ways and means committee, Admiral Train disclosed that a total of more than $45,000 in donations has been received this year.

Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, in behalf of the Children's County Home for Convalescent Children, 18th and Bunker Hill rd. ne., told the meeting that the home, because of the anticipated deficit next year, probably will have to close.

In 1948, she said, the home had to sell $5000 of its capital, which representated a third of its total resources, to stay open.

The following persons were chosen hospital directors for five-year terms: Dr. John A. Talbot, orthopedic surgeon and secretary of the hospital's board; Alexander F. Jones, assistant to the publisher of The Washington Post; Miss Anne-Carter Green, long-time hospital official and former president of the Junior League.

Hugh H. Obear, attorney; Rudolph Kauffman, 2d, a director of the Evening Star Newspaper; Samuel Spencer, attorney; Orme Wilson, retired diplomat.

Area Hospital Use Urged by Planners Here

Hospital planners, faced with a drop in gifts and endowments, and the high cost of medical equipment and services, must keep costs down by setting up hospitals to serve areas rather than individual communities.

This was explained to 70 hospital officials here yesterday by Earl L. Koos, chairman of the department of sociology of the University of Rochester (N. Y.). He addressed the Institute on Hospital Planning conducted by the American Hospital Association, and sponsored by the Maryland-District of Columbia Hospital Association.

Advice to Communities

"Hospitals in smaller communities can't possibly have all the specialized services of personnel and equipment. Why should they? But the communities can get the best, and at a lower cost, by using larger hospitals in their areas," Dr. Koos declared.

He warned that saddling small communities with hospitals they cannot afford is "totally unrealistic." There are "lots of such white elephants" that cannot be maintained, he said, adding that some are built with gifts that do not provide for maintenance, while others are erected by hospital officials "who want to make a name for themselves" so they will obtain bigger jobs.

Dr. Alan Craig, New York hospital consultant, also said "we are thinking in terms of systems of hospitals." He proposed providing facilities for doctors to see their private patients in hospitals, even though the patients are not admitted as bed patients. They should also be able to use clinical services, he said.

The institute, which opened yesterday, will continue through Friday at the Wardman Park Hotel. Today's sessions will take up technical problems in hospital construction.

Playgrounds Racial Issue Precipitates Hot Debate

One Member Quits Citizens' Group in Georgetown During Verbal Free-for-All

A meeting of the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown flared into a verbal free-for-all last night over a discussion by Gen. U. S. Grant 3d as to whether the District or Federal Government should assume jurisdiction of District playgrounds.

Grant, chairman of the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission, was charged by members from the floor with talking "mumbo-jumbo" when he declared that operation of the playgrounds was a question of jurisdiction and nat racial regregation.

As the debate became heated one member resigned and several others walked out.

Writer Quits Group

Henry Pringle, a writer, who lives at 3319 N st. nw., resigned from the organization when his resolution asking the association to go on record as favoring nonsegragation in District playgrounds was tabled, and John L. Burling, 2726 N st. nw., lawyer in the Department of Justice, bluntly asked, "Aren't we talking solely about a racial problem?"

Through the debate Grant insisted that the segregation problem was heightened as the result of an opinion by Solicitor Mastin G. White, Interior Department, stating that the 62 playgrounds in the District can be used by the Recreation Department only by agreement with the National Park Service of the Interior Department.

Grant said White based his decision on a 1942 Act creating the Recreation Board and authorizing it to operate District and Federal playgrounds under a mutual agreement. Although the Recreation Board took over operation of the playgrounds there was no definitive agreement about operation and policy between the board and the National Park Service, Grant explained.

In other action the association adopted a resolution favoring the prohibition of use of alleys for any purpose other than garages. The resolution also stated that alley development for human habitation or commercial development constitutes a fire and health hazard.

West Kensington Group Chooses First Officers

The newly organized West Kensington (Md.) Civic Association last night elected Joseph M. Mathias, Bethesda attorney, as its first president.

Other officers chosen at the meeting held at the Kensington Elementary School, include Dohrman Byers, vice president; Richard Basnor, recording secretary; Mrs. Louise Cochran, corresponding secretary, and Byron Story, treasurer.

The association includes residents of subdivisions known as Kensington Estates, Kensington Terrace, Warner st. and Knowles ave.

Bradbury Heights To Get Street Lights

Bradbury Heights (Md.), a community with 322 homes, will soon get its first street lights, its citizens association was told last night.

A letter from the Prince Georges County Commissioners was read at a meeting of the Bradbury Heights Association at Coral Hill Community Hall approving installation of 56 street lights.

The association also elected James C. Hayes president for 1949, along with Clifton Lutton, vice president; James Barker, corresponding and recording secretary; Robert Croop, financial secretary; Alton Ylyles, treasurer; Michael Hill and Louis White, sergeant-at-arms, and Joseph McCauley and Albert Talbert, trustees.

Group Asks Escalators In Dupont Underpass

Escalators at streetcar stops in the Dupont Circle underpass Dupont Circle Citizens Association were urged yesterday by the tion, meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

Copies of the resolution were ordered sent to the D. C. Commissioners, the Congressional committees and to the Federation of Citizens' Associations.

Harral Mulliken, chairman of the association's traffic and streets committee, said the original plans, called for escalators, but because of prohibitive cost they are now to be replaced by steps. The 36 steps needed to reach the street will be difficult and dangerous for the aged, and for persons suffering from heart disease and arthritis.

Bowman to Represent Forest Hills Citizens

G. T. Bowman, president of the Forest Hills Citizens Association, last night was named a delegate to the Washington Federation of Citizens Associations.

He will replace Edward L. Springer, who will be out of the city for four months and who resigned at last night's meeting at the Ben W. Murch School, 30th and Davenport sts. nw.

Abandoned Baby . . .

The Washington Post

BLOND AND BLUE EYES—Police were seeking clues to the identity of the mother of this cute baby girl last night as the baby rested at Gallinger Hospital. The baby was found last Saturday night by Mrs. Blanche Valerie Jordan in the vestibule of her apartment house at 143 Eleventh st. ne. Wrapped in a blanket, the child wore a pink sweater with blue flowers.

Woman Eager to Adopt Baby Finds Red Tape Big Obstacle

If Mrs. Blanche Jordan, 35, of 143 11th st. ne., can find a way to get around red tape tying up adoption procedures here, an abandoned baby girl will find a happy home.

Mrs Jordan, who has no children said she could hardly bear turning the baby over to police after finding it practically on her doorstep Saturday night. The 2-month-old infant, red-haired and blue-eyed, was found in the vestibule outside of Mrs. Jordan's first floor apartment about 9 p.m.

The baby was wrapped in a blanket and wore a pink sweater with blue flowers. Whoever left her there, left a supply of extra diapers and an extra bottle but no note of explanation. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital where her condition was described as "healthy" yesterday.

Mrs. Jordan, whose husband is a chief pharmacist's mate in the Navy, said she had applied to adopt a child some years ago in Texas but never in the District.

"I certainly would like to have this little girl, but they tell me I will have to wait at least a year. If I must wait that long, I would rather take another child, who would still be very young. But if there is any way I can have this one in less than a year, I'll certainly take her," Mrs. Jordan declared, adding she planned in the meantime to see if time-consuming technicalities and petitions could be speeded up.

Doctors' Decision Rules Out Boy's 'Blue Baby' Operation

Last hope of a normal life expectancy apparently faded yesterday for a 13-year-old Virginia "blue baby" whose heart malformation was pronounced "inoperable" by specialists at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

The Washington Post

CLAUDE SINE

Heart malformation "inoperable"

And as Claude Sine headed for his home in Mountain Falls, Va.—and probably an early death—another sufferer from a heart malformation, William Perry Stewart, 22, of Silver Spring, Md., was undergoing his first tests at the same heart clinic to establish whether the "blue baby" operation might correct his condition.

Claude has been suffering from pulmonic stenosis—a stricture in his pulmonary artery—since he was four. The stricture impedes the flow of blood from his heart to his lungs and his blood doesn't get enough oxygen. He can't play with other boys, he tires easily, is practically an invalid. Children with heart malformations of that nature seldom live to maturity.

Four years ago Drs. Alfred Blalock and Helen B. Taussig originated a technique at the Johns Hopkins cardiac clinic that has brought improvement to 85 per cent of 800 such cases treated there. Roughly, it consists, associates explained, of severing the subclavian artery—and sewing the end nearest the heart to a hole cut into one of the main branches of the pulmonary artery, creating a "detour" that sends an auxiliary supply of blood into the pulmonary artery, increasing the pulmonary circulation and thus counteracting the effects of the malformation.

But that operation, it was explained, has proved effective only when the patient has two other conditions in addition to pulmonary stenosis. These conditions medical men call overriding aorta and a defect in septum, all three such conditions together making up what is called the tetrology of Fallot, after the French physician who first described it many years ago.

An operation where pulmonary stenosis alone exists has been shown to cause an imbalance in the circulatory system and a strain on the heart that invariably brings early cardiac failure, the experts said. Thus, that operation would only hasten the end for Claude Sine, a farmer's son whose main interest in life has been his father's horses and his local 4-H Club activities.

Baker's Helper Is Charged With Redskin Clothes Thefts

Up to yesterday, half the members of the Washington Redskins had begun to feel they were playing football simply to replace the clothes someone had been stealing from them since mid-October.

Sice then, more than $1200 in tailor-made gabardine and covert cloth suits and trousers, slacks, sportscoats and topcoats had been stolen from their third-floor quarters at the Roosevelt Hotel, 2101 16th st. nw.

Yesterday a neat bit of police work by Detective Sergt. Edwin F. Talbot of the general assignment squad, and squad car privates Louis A. Louzopone and Joseph Stanczack of the Thirteenth Precinct, slipped the responsibility for the missing farments on burly, broad-shouldered Amos Tinker, 20, a baker's helper of 1412 Corcoran st. nw.

Tinker was charged with one case of housebreaking—that of entering Tackle John Koniszewski's quarters on November 29 and making off with three suits. He has admitted theft of apparel from 12 other players, police said, more than half of which has been recovered in pawn shops.

According to Sergeant Talbot, Tinker had acquired pass keys to all rooms on the hotel's third floor. In visiting them, however, he was noticed by several persons, Talbot said, who described him to Officers Louzopone and Stanczack.

The officers then searched police files, came up with a picture of Tinker, which the witnesses recognized. Yesterday, while Sergeant Talbot held Tinker's attention on the phone, the two officers called at his house and arrested him. He will appear in court today.

Allied Civic Groups Seek Candidate in Council Race

Failure to Include Silver Spring Man On Ticket Spurs Independent Move

A move to get a Silver Spring, Md., resident to run for Montgomery County's first council under charter government was under way yesterday.

Pushing the move were Victor J. Richter, president of the Silver Spring Allied Civic Groups and a charter supporter, and Ralph D. Boyd, a former president of the allied groups.

The move grew out of failure of the nominating subcommittee of the Montgomery County Charter Committee to select any Silver Spring resident on its seven-member council slate announced Friday.

The subcommittee announced the following slate: P. G. Ligon, of Brinklow; Augustus R. Selby, Germantown; Thomas C. Kelley, Darnestown; Mrs. Dorothy S. Himstead, Chevy Chase; J. Douglas Bradshaw, Takoma Park; Frederic P. Lee, Bethesda, and Dr. Lewis Merriam, Kensington.

Proponents of a Silver Spring representative on the council point out that Silver Spring is the county's most populous area.

Allen H. Gardner, chairman of the charter committee's nominating group and a Silver Spring resident himself, declined comment yesterday on the Silver Spring move. He said a reply probably would be made tonight at a dinner of the charter committee at Indian Spring Country Club.

At that time, the seven candidates will be presented to the entire charter committee for approval, he said.

Other criticism of the failure to include a Silver Spring candidate on the slate came from Blair Lee 3d, editor of the Maryland News and president of the Silver Spring Board of Trade.

Lee said the failure had produced "widespread resentment" in Silver Spring. He predicted the failure might spur a move to incorporate Silver Spring, divorcing it from the county government.

Meanwhile, the County Commissioners, who last Thursday became "councilmen" under the charter were to hold their first regular meeting in their new capacity today.

Patterson Will Trial to Open On January 18

Trial of the contested $16,500,000 will of Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson, late publisher of the Washington Times-Herald, was set for January 18 by District Court Judge James W. Morris yesterday.

The will is being contested by Mrs. Felicia Gizycka, who contends her mother was of unsound mind and subjected to coercion and undue influence in making it.

Meanwhile, the League of Republican Women filed notice in District Court that it is an interested party in the lawsuit. The league was bequeathed the Dupont Circle home of Mrs. Patterson in one of her earlier wills.

Red Cross Named

The will trial originally was scheduled to start yesterday, but Harold A. Kertz, one of the attorneys for Mrs. Gizycka, asked for a delay.

Kertz asked for a trial date not earlier than January 31, because, he said, 42 witnesses who live outside the District must be notified. These include one person in Ireland and another in Canada, he said.

Depositions Necessary

Moreover, Kertz said preparation of the case for trial will involve the taking of numerous depositions.

An earlier date for trial January 5, was urged however by William E. Leahy, representing executors of the will. "I don't believe the court wants to be in the position of running a daily newspaper," Leahy said.

2 Mothers-in-Law Get Court Backing

Municipal Court sided with two mothers-in-law yesterday. Charged with threatening to cut his mother-in-law's heart out, Thomas R. Johnson, 50, of 457 L st. sw., was placed under a $300 peace bond.

Mrs. Priscilla Burgess, 69, testified that Johnson came home drinking Saturday, pulled out a knife and said, "I'll cut your heart out and show it to you."

Vernon Payne, 26, of No. 8 7th st. se., was found guilty of assaulting his wife's mother, Mrs. Helen Nagle, 68, who said he came home drinking and struck her in the face five times, shattering her glasses while doing it. Sentencing was deferred.

Each mother-in-law resides at the home of the daughter and son-in-law.

Capital Airlines Fined

Capital Airlines, Inc., was fined $500 in Alexandria District Court yesterday on a charge of permitting persons to ride their planes at less than regular fare.

The company did not contest any of the eight charges of violation of the Civil Aeronautics Administration Act of 1938 in the past two years.

Hayes Dever, secretary and public relations director of the airline, said tickets were given in exchange for radio time and other forms of advertising.

Judge Albert V. Bryan imposed the minimum fine and suspended the fine on three counts.

Shoplifter 'Tags' Herself

Marcellina Black, 20, of 227 Dixon's ct. sw., was sentenced to jail for 360 days yesterday on a charge of shoplifting.

According to Municipal Court testimony, Miss Black had lifted an $18.90 infant's suit from Morton's, 312-314 7th st. nw.

She was arrested, the court was told, when a detective saw her leaving the store with the price-tag of the stolen goods sticking out of her coat.

School Bids Advertised

Construction bids for the new Walker-Jones Elementary School, to be built at 1st and L sts. nw., were advertised yesterday by the District Commissioners. Contractors have 28 days in which to file estimates.

The new three-story brick building with limestone trim will contain 24 classrooms and an assembly-hall gymnasium. It will replace two eight-classroom buildings, the Walker, 3d and K sts. nw., and the Jones, 1st and L sts. nw.

Given 360-Day Term

Wade Perry, 31, of 909 27th st. nw., was sentenced to a 360-day jail term yesterday by Judge George D. Neilson in Municipal Court on a charge of stealing a battery from a parked automobile.

W. E. Downey, Spanish War Veteran, Dies

Walter Edward Downey, 65, adjutant general of the United Spanish War Veterans, died yesterday at his home, 2032 Belmont rd. nw., of coronary thrombosis.

Mr. Downey, in charge of the business affairs of the veterans' organization since January, 1946, returned only last week from Florida, where he made arrangements for the national encampment next fall in Tampa, Fla.

A memorial service for Mr. Downey, conducted at the Hines funeral home last night by the District chapter of the USWV, was attended by Charles R. Barefoot, national commander. Barefoot arrived here by air last night from Toledo, Ohio, to take over national headquarters temporarily.

Born in Milwaukee

Born in Milwaukee, Minn., Mr. Downey attended school there and enlisted in the Navy when he was 17. He served in Pacific waters on the USS Wisconsin and the USS New Orleans from 1901 till 1905, during the time of the Philippine Insurrections.

He left the Navy in 1905, worked as a cashier in the Duluth, Minn., Bank of Commerce & Savings and served at the same time as commander of the Minnesota Department of the Spanish War Veterans.

In 1909 he married Ida Lee Butler, and later became examiner for the State of Minnesota. From 1937 to 1946 he was commandant of the Minnesota State Soldiers Home at Minneapolis, Minn.

Burial In Minneapolis

In 1946 he came to Washington as quartermaster general of the United Spanish Veterans, in charge of business matters for the group. He was given the title of adjutant general in August of this year by the national encampment which voted to combine that honorary office with the quartermaster general's.

Mr. Downey, who was a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, a Mason and a Shriner, leaves his wife, of the Belmont st. address.

Services and burial will be in Minneapolis, Minn., on Thursday.

Launch Member Drive

The Bellevue Citizens Association, meeting at 213 Byer rd. sw., voted last night to launch a membership campaign to reach as many residents of the community as possible. The association now has 60 members.

Civic Associations' Annual Dinner . . .

The Washington Post

HONOR GUEST—With Judge Armond W. Scott of the Municipal Court as guest of honor, the Federation of Civic Associations held its annual dinner last night at the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A., 9th and Rhode Island ave. nw. Left to right are: Ernest F. Harper, president of the federation; Judge George P. Barse and Judge Scott of the Municipal Court

King George School Case Is Postponed

Richmond, Va., Dec. 6 (Spl.).—Hearing of a contempt citation against the King George County Board of Education was continued today in United States District Court until September, 1949.

The postponement was granted by Judge Sterling Hutchinson at the request of attorneys for the school board, which has been charged with failure to provide equal educational facilities for Negro pupils.

Judge Hutchinson said the continuance was based on an understanding between attorneys for the school board and a group of Negro school children, "looking to an amicable adjustment by the parties of the differences constituting the subject matter of this litigation."

Hyattsville Fights Parking Meter Writ

Hyattsville City Council last night instructed City Attorney Nicholas Orem to set about dissolving an injunction which prohibits parking meters in the Queens Chapel shopping center.

The injunction was obtained in Prince Georges County Circuit Court in October by Newton Properties, owner of the shopping district.

The firm contended the sidewalk is private property and has not been dedicated to public use.

Another injunction against the city clocking meters in the older district has been dissolved by the court.

Judge Scott Honored at Civic Dinner

Municipal Court Judge Armond W. Scott last night was honored at the annual dinner of the Federation of Civic Associations.

Judge George P. Barse, also of Municipal Court, lauded Judge Scott for his accomplishments as an "aggressive attorney" and an outstanding jurist. The meeting, held at Phillis Wheatley Young Women's Christian Association, was attended by 300 persons from 27 civic groups.

As mistress of ceremonies, Mrs. Ida S. Taylor presented to Bernard Chapman, president of the Northeast Boundry Civic Association, the Evening Star award for best civic association work of the year. This work consisted of mobilization of the citizens of the Northeast section in the fight for better conditions at Browne Junior High School.

Thurman L. Dodson, president of the National Bar Association, and Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent of schools, also paid tribute to Judge Scott.

On behalf of the federation, Mrs. Velma Williams, vice president and member of the Board of Education, presented Judge Scott with a plaque from the organized citizenry of Washington "for his work among us as jurist extraordinary."

Pumphrey Rites to Be On Wednesday

William Reuben Pumphrey, 63, of Rockville, Md., a Montgomery County funeral director, died early yesterday at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, after a short illness.

Mr. Pumphrey

Mr. Pumphrey at his death conducted a funeral home in Rockville at 300 West Montgomery ave., and one in Bethesda at 7557 Wisconsin ave. The family has been in the business for three generations.

Born near Rockville, Mr. Pumphrey was a lifelong resident of the county. He attended the public schools, and as a young man became associated with his father in the operation of the Rockville funeral home.

At his father's death, he took over the business, and about 10 years ago enlarged it.

Well known in his business, he was at one time president of the Maryland State Funeral Directors' Association, as well as a member of National Selected Morticians and National Funeral Directors Association.

He also was a member of the Columbia Country Club, a past master of Montgomery Lodge of Masons at Rockville. He also belonged to Rockville Methodist Church.

Services will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday in the Rockville Funeral home. Burial will be in Rockville Union Cemetery.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Irene Pumphrey, he leaves a son, Robert A. Pumphrey, 5642 Audubon rd., and two grandchildren.

Board of Trade Resolution Honors Frank B. Noyes

The Washington Board of Trade last night adopted a resolution in memory of Frank B. Noyes, chairman of the board of the Evening Star Newspaper Co., and a founder of the Associated Press, who died December 1.

The resolution said his death "is a loss to that newspaper, the Board of Trade and the community, shared by all who knew Mr. Noyes or had the great privilege of working with him."

Copies, signed by the board's president and secretary, will be sent to the family and to officers of the Evening Star.

Proposed Tax Rises Opposed In Arlington

Proposed Arlington taxes on businesses and professions faced some outspoken opposition last night during a public hearing at the Arlington Courthouse.

More than 150 persons packed the Circuit Court room, where the meeting was held, stood in the aisles and the doorways as the county board heard their views.

Also up for consideration, in addition to the business levies, was a tax on automobile licenses.

Designed to Raise $400,000

The two measures are expected to raise roughly $400,000 annually if and when the board the approves them.

Included among opponents of the business and professional levies was William P. Ames, who declared that if taxes continue to rise "industry has got to stop" in Arlington.

Attorneys Oren Lewis and Frank L. Ball declared the professional tax would work a "hardship" on county dentists and doctors.

Proposed Fees Vary

Business privilege licenses under the proposal would be taxed at rates ranging from 11 to 52 cents for each $100 of gross revenue. For some businesses and professions, a flat license fee is called for.

Paul A. Hill, secretary of the Arlington Chamber of Commerce, urged that a fair share of the money raised from the proposed taxes be used to benefit business areas.

James Simmonds, representing Arlington's dry cleaners urged that nonresident dry cleaning establishments doing business in Arlington be assessed a flat tax rate under the proposed tax bill.

The county board took no action on the tax measures last night.

H. L. Campbell Funeral Rites Set Thursday

Funeral services for H. Lyle Campbell, 68, construction superintendent, who died here Sunday, will be held Thursday in his family's burial ground in St. Louis, Mo.

Mr. Campbell

Mr. Campbell was superintendent of construction in the Office of the Architect of the Capitol from October 25 until his death. He was assigned to aid in remodeling of the Senate wing of the Capitol, but became ill the day after the appointment was made. He died in Doctors Hospital.

He resided at 4246 Warren st. nw., where he devoted much time to growing roses.

He leaves his widow, Mrs. Maldy S. Campbell, and two sons, David L. Campbell of San Francisco and Robert F. Campbell of Newark, N. J.

Mr. Campbell came here in 1936. He was director of construction review for the Federal Public Housing administrator before going to the office of the Capitol architect.

Born and educated in private and public schools in St. Louis, he later attended advanced education classes for adults. He was a trustee in the West Presbyterian Church in St. Louis and a Mason.

Mrs. Lulie Goldsberry

Funeral services for Mrs. Lulie Seaton Chase Goldsberry, 89, retired principal of Slater Elementary School, will be held at 11 a.m. today at her home, 1516 R st. nw. Burial will take place in Harmony Cemetery.

Mrs. Goldsberry, who died Saturday after a long illness, served in the Washington school system for approximately 30 years and was principal of Slater School for 10 years. She was principal of the school in the years prior to World War I. She was a native of Washington.

Joseph Egan Dies; Headed Western Union

Paris, Dec. 6 (AP).—Joseph L. Egan, 62, president of Western Union Telegraph Co., died at Monte Carlo today. He suffered a heart attack.

Egan was a native of New York City. He attended Columbia University and New York Law School. He was a director of the Chase National Bank, American Express Co., the Teleregister Corp., American District Telegraph Co. and numerous subsidiaries of Western Union.

In addition to his widow, he is survived by a son, Ronald, and daughter, Mrs. Irene O'Brien.

CORRECTION

In Monday's installment of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's book, "Crusade in Europe," The Washington Post should have quoted General Eisenhower as saying: "Military preparedness alone is an inadequate answer to the problem. Communism inspires and enables its militant preachers to exploit injustices and inequity among men." The statement was published incorrectly as "Military preparedness alone is an adequate answer to the problem."

Reburial Rites for Lieut. Eaton Scheduled Today at Arlington

Reburial rites will be held at 11 a. m. today at Arlington Cemetery for First Lieut. Charles Hastings Eaton, who was killed in action April 18, 1945, in the vicinity of Gorgognano, Italy.

Lieut. Eaton

Holder of a Purple Heart, Lieutenant Eaton was posthumorously awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for heroism while with the Fifth Army in Italy. The citation said, in part:

"After three previous attempts to seize a vital enemy held building had failed, First Lieutenant Eaton led his platoon in another assault to take the strong point. When his platoon was halted . . . Lieutenant Eaton stood up in full view of the enemy and fired a rocket directly into a German emplacement to destroy the position."

Born in New York City November 24, 1916, Lieutenant Eaton moved to Washington as a child and attended Friends School here. Later he attended McDonogh School, McDonogh, Md., where he held a wrestling championship award, and subsequently Washington and Lee University at Lexington, Va. He belonged to Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

He entered the Army after working as a salesman for a manufacturing firm and graduated from Officers Candidate School at Fort Benning, Ga. He was commissioned a second lieutenant July 6, 1942.

Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Paul E. Leiber, his stepfather, Col. Paul E. Leiber, United States Army, retired, both of 5514 Bradley blvd., Chevy Chase, Md.; his twin brother, Dr. Hamilton D. Eaton, University of Connecticut, and his older brother, Lieut. Col. Ernest R. Eaton, also of Chevy Chase.

Finland's Independence Celebrated at Reception

By Elizabeth Maguire

HUNDREDS yesterday thronged the Finnish Legation to celebrate Finnish Independence Day. Top diplomats of Europe were there, as well as State Department officials and residential society.

The Minister and Madame Jutila received their guests in the drawing room between 6 and 8 o'clock. Through the receiving hours they were assisted by their daughter, Miss Vappu Jutila, who was dressed in native costume.

"On December 5, 1917," the Minister explained, "Finland won her independence from Russia." And many representatives of the Russian Embassy were on hand yesterday attending the fete. The Soviet Ambassador, Alexander Panyushkin, was there, as well as the Naval Attache, Rear Admiral Eugeni Georgievich Glinkov, and the new Military Attache, Maj. Gen. I. A. Belshakov.

"It's tough sledding," remarked the British Minister F. R. Hoyer Millar, as he made his way through the crowded drawing room. He accompanied Mrs. Hoyer Millar, who had picked her way through the crowd several minutes before and was waiting for him at the door.

Mme. Thor Thors, whose husband, the Icelandic Minister, is at the U.N. in Paris, was escorted to the reception by the Icelandic Counselor, Magnus V. Magnusson. Mme. Thors was beautifully gowned in a Paris frock of black satin, and her hat, the prettiest there, was black velvet trimmed with brown transparent straw and aigrette feathers.

The Ambasasdor of India and Lady Rama Rau were among the guests, she in American Beauty sari with black Spanish shawl for a wrap. Other guests included the Ambassador of New Zealand and Lady Berendsen, the Ambassador of Egypt and Mme. Abdul Rahim, the Ambassador of Ecuador, Augusto Dillon; the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Erkin, the new Swedish Ambassador and his handsome wife, Mme. Boheman; the Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Morgenstierne, the Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais, the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann and Chief of Protocol, Stanley Woodward.

Mme. Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, said she would be at the Chinese Bazaar tomorrow promptly at 9 to prepare her table for opening hour at 10. Harry de Pauer of CARE bade farewell to a number of friends at the party, saying, "I have to be at the bridge table sharp at 8."

The Swiss Counselor, Werner Fuchss, was at the party, talking with the Swedish First Secretary and Mme. Rydbeck, and the head of FAO, Norris Dodd, attended with his daughter, Mrs. Mary Lewis. Still others included Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred D. Whittemore, the Indian Minister and Mme. Nehru, Capt. and Mrs. Floyd F. Ferris and Mrs. Ruth Yohn.

GEN. EFISIO MARRAS, Chief of Staff of the Italian Army, who is visiting Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, was honored yesterday at several parties. At luncheon he was entertained at the Shoreham by Mario Luciolli, Counselor of the Italian Embassy. Later, he was honored at a small reception held at 5:30 o'clock at the home of Col. Anthony Drexel Biddle in Georgetown. The party was stag, as Mrs. Biddle is in a hospital with her small son, who was born November 30.

Others included the Ambassador of Australia and Mrs. Makin, Associate Justice and Mrs. Harold H. Burton, Chief Justice of the U. S. Court of Appeals for D. C. Harold M. Stephens, and Mrs. Stephens; the Secrtary of the President and Mrs. Charles G. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle, the Minister Counselor of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Cohn, and the Minister Counselor and Senora de Vega.

AT THE Netherlands Embassy, the Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens entertained at dinner in honor of their house guests, Sir Kenneth and Lady Lee of Ewhurst, England.

MR. AND MRS. FRED L. PREU were "at home" yesterday from 6 to 8 at their home at 3017 Dumbarton ave. Mr. Preu returned Friday from China where he served on the Far East Mission for ECA and a surprise party was given for him the following day. Among many guests who dropped by were the Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, Mr. and Mrs. Tyler Wood, Col. and Mrs. Robert B. McRae, John Weigel, Mrs. Roxana Doran, Dr. Arthur Bunce and others who have recently returned from the Far East.

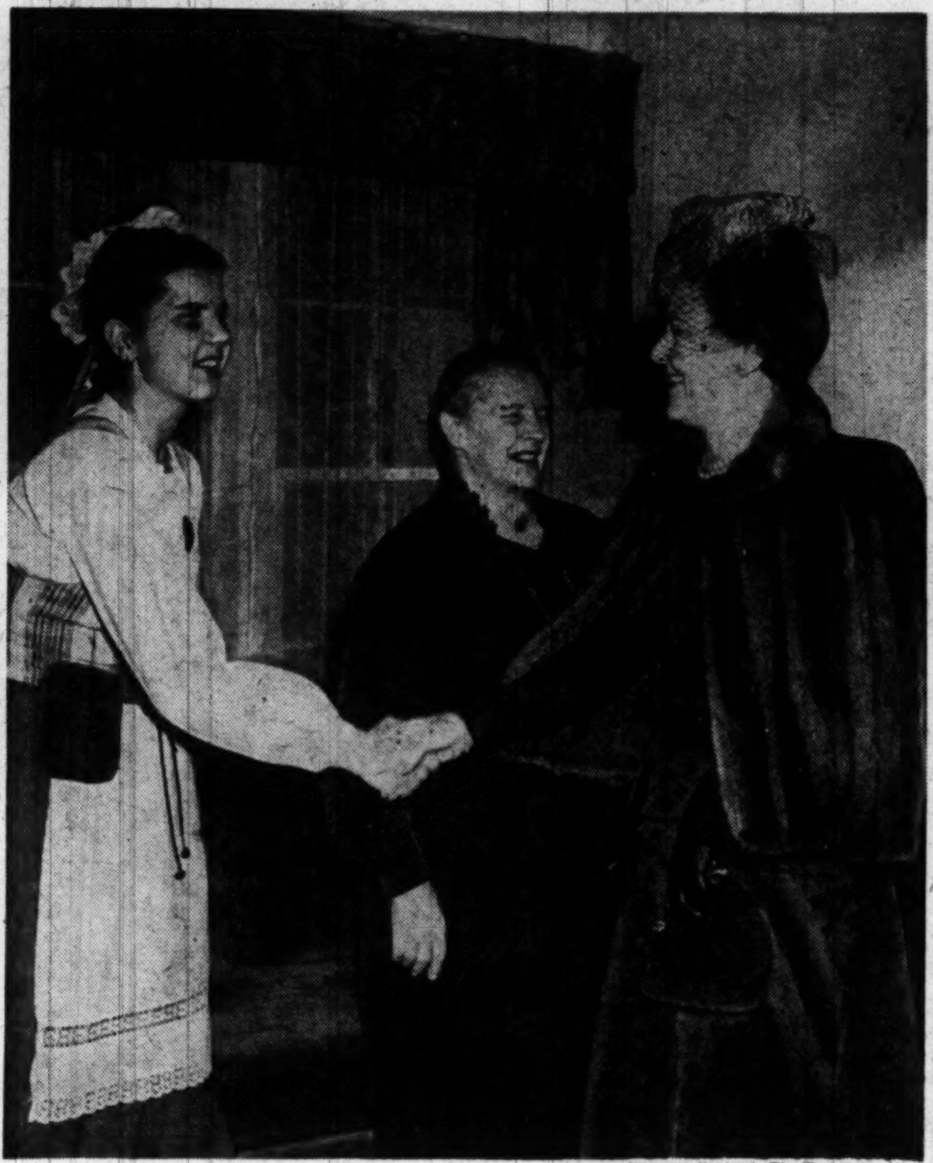
MME. VLADIMIR RYBAR and Mrs. Leslie Price Jacobs were joint hostesses last evening at a dinner they gave at Mme. Rybar's house at 3700 Massachusetts ave. The dinner was one of a series Ranking guests were the Ambassador of India and Lady Rama Rau.



By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

THE POPULAR Minister of Finland and Mme. Jutila hosted a reception at the Legation yesterday in celebration of Finnish Independence Day. Here, as smiling Mme. Jutila looks on, their daughter, Miss Vappu Jutila, dressed in native costume, extends a hand in greeting to Mme. Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador

Tale of a Chinese Curse

Sparks May Fly, and Spines Will Tingle at Meeting Of Mme. Chiang, Mme. Koo

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

AT DEADLINE, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's appearance at tomorrow's Chinese Embassy Charity Bazaar was still uncertain. Courtesy, it seems, would demand at least a quick nip-in. If the madam does show and is escorted the rounds by Chinese Ambassadress Mme. Wellington Koo, there will be a tingling situation adeptly concealed from onlookers by Oriental deadpan taciturnity.

The "situation runs a spine-tingling gamut from a Chinese curse to feminine jealousy. Back in 1928 Chiang Kai-shek ordered Wellington Koo's arrest and the confiscation of Madame Koo's famous Peking Palace.

The Ambassador escaped, remained two years in exile until recalled to Nanking as Minister of Foreign Affairs by the desperate generalissimo then, as now, on a political and military hotspot.

Found Safety in British Zone

A FEW YEARS earlier the Koos had also been forced to flee Peking when the late "Christian General," Feng Yu-hsiang, afterward close Chiang collaborator, captured China's capital.

In each crisis Wellington Koo sought temporary shelter on Wei-hai-wei, a British leased island off the China coast. And, according to the memoirs of Sir Reginald Johnson, English tutor of the Boy Emperor Pu-yi, the first escape was such a close shave that Koo fled disguised as a woman. To a Chinese this subterfuge rates loss of face not easily forgotten.

Madame Koo left Peking for the safety of Tientsin's British concession rather more easily. She stuffed her two sons, Pekinese dogs, nurse, amah, and an obliging Canadian friend of her husband's, into her Rolls Royce limousine (so large a job it was nicknamed the Crystal Palace) which was protected from encroaching soldiery by a huge Union Jack fluttering from radiator cap.

So angry was she at the loss of her palace that "in my secret heart I put an evil curse on those who dared to sleep under its roof. "On each return to Peking, Madame Koo found her palace in partial ruins, many of her priceless objets d'art stolen, even the plumbing removed. Though there were other occupants, members of the Soong family lived there for long stretches, and the revered Sun Yat-sen, removed from an American hospital, died in the palace in 1925.

Word Gets Around

WORD OF THE CURSE got around a bit and much later, when Wang Ching-wei, the Japanese puppet ruler in Nanking, lived there—and became dangerously ill—his wife whisked him out on a stretcher! And now, a trifle delayed, it seems as though Madame Koo's curse was about to become reactivated!

Perhaps this is why Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, when in Washington, always stays at the home of her brother, T. V. Soong, rather than in the embassy!

Mrs. Truman Honor Guest At Luncheon

MRS. TRUMAN was honored at a luncheon yesterday by Mrs. Charles Sawyer, wife of the Secretary of Commerce. The luncheon was given at 1 o'clock at the 1925 F Street Club. Fall flowers were placed in the drawing room, where the guests gathered for cocktails, and in the dining room. A white orchid was presented to Mrs. Truman, and the hostess wore a purple orchid.

Cabinet wives and little Cabinet wives comprised the guest list. Those who attended were Mrs. John W. Snyder, Mrs. James Forrestal, Mrs. Thomas Campbell Clark, Mrs. Jesse Monroe Donaldson, Mrs. J. A. Krug, Mrs. Charles Franklin Brannan, Mrs. Kenneth Claiborne Royall, Mrs. John L. Sullivan and Mrs. W. Stuart Symington.

Also, Mrs. Robert A. Lovett, Mrs. Oscar L. Chapman, Mrs. Edward H. Foley, jr., Mrs. Vincent C. Burke, Mrs. Arthur S. Barrows, Mrs. W. John Kenney, Mrs. Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., Mrs. John Gibson, Mrs. Gordon Grey and Mrs. Peyton Ford.

The Gift Box

MEN who find it "impossible" to shop for the women in their life should be reminded that most women carry wallets these days. That's one item on which the menfolk feel they qualify as experts and can select with pleasure.

Women like them a shade gayer than men do, so it's a wonderful opportunity for a man to buy a wallet he admires but which he finds too fancy for himself.

WARNING: Some women look to see what's inside, when they get a wallet for Christmas.

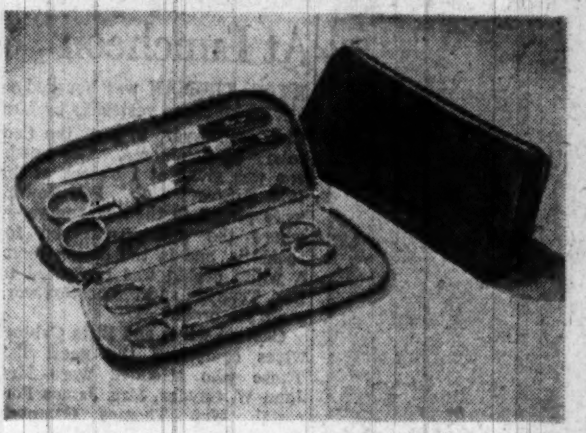
IF YOU like to buy half a dozen small gifts for each member of your immediate family, think these over:

For the ladies, a purse-size bottle of hand lotion, attractive linen handkerchiefs, a rope of pearls, a new shade of nail polish, a box of verseless cards to suit any occasion, a darning egg or a small sewing kit for traveling.

For the gentlemen, nice white handkerchiefs to encourage tucking one in the breast pocket of the suit, a complete shoeshine kit, initialed match books, shoe covers for traveling.



EVERY time you cut your nails with your sewing scissors you must think how nice it would be to have just the right manicure implements. Nice to have and nice to give to somebody you care about.

Peggy Sage makes a set which consists of cuticle nipper and cuticle scissors, nail scissors, cuticle pusher, cuticle spoon, tweezers and triple-cut steel file. The zipper-closing case is genuine leather. It's a practical Christmas gift and it's available at most department and drug stores.

Truman Israeli Policy Hailed at ORT Session

By Genevieve Reynolds

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S unflagging support of a free State of Israel has created a more favorable climate for its recognition by other nations, plus increasing its chances for admission into the United Nations. This is the opinion expressed by Harry Zinder, press attache to the Israli government, one of the major speakers at the Women's American ORT's regional institute held yesterday in the Willard Hotel.

"ORT's Progress-of-Ten-years in Washington was discussed by Mrs. Abe Cohen, president of the Washington region. Mrs. Ludwig Kaphan, national president of the organization, told of "ORT's Work in Europe," and Mrs. Anna C. Schneiderman, vice president of Women's American ORT, outlined the over-all program. Both Mrs. Kaphan and Mrs. Schneiderman came down from their homes in New York to address the gathering.

Israel's Gains

"We may not get admission to the U.N. at this session but we have made tremendous gains in a negative way because we have killed forever the Bernadotte plan," the speaker said.

Asserting that Israel would not give up 1 acre of Negev, he declared, "We have no intention or right to bargain over Negev. Galilee is a problem completely divorced from it."

The speaker said that the state of Israel had set its elections for January 25. "Once the elections are over there is no reason why Britain, Belgium and other nations shouldn't recognize Israel as a free state, and no reason why Israel shouldn't be admitted into the U. N.," he emphasized.

He said that when peace comes there will be tremendous opportunities for industrial development in Negev. "I hope for Israel's sake there won't be oil in Negev," he said. "If there is oil we will lose our independence and integrity in the scramble of international politics for the oil."

A mission now is surveying industrial possibilities in Negev where hundreds of millions of dollars would be invested to aid the immigrants who must be acclimated to their new home, according to Zinder. He pointed out that 115,000 immigrants have been brought into Israel within the past 12 months.

No Soviet Aid

Zinder denied that the Israeli government is getting military aid from the Soviets. "There are no Soviet agents or soldiers or observers in the Israeli army," he emphasized. "Only Soviets in the country are those connected with their country's missions.

As for what lies ahead of Israel, Zinder declared, "We have no intention of casting our lot with either the East or West." We're independent and will remain so. Israeli will not curry favor or bow to anyone. We're the strongest power in the Middle East."

"Israel's only loyalty is to the United Nations," he said. "We realize that we are a baby, created by the U. N."

Discussing the American Jews' relationship to the Jews in Israel, he said that the Jews of Israel still look to the Jews of Europe and America for support, and want to build a two-way bridgeway for mutual and reciprocal contributions.

Membership Growth

Mrs. Cohen reported that the three Washington chapters of ORT had grown from 12 to 900 members within the past 10 years. She told how the Women's American ORT had helped to set up vocational rehabilitation and training programs for some 27,000 in DP camps in Europe.

Recently back from France, Mrs. Kaphan told of the vocational training being given to thousands through the Organization for Rehabilitation Through Training in a Paris School. She said that Mrs. Roosevelt visited the Paris school on October 22 to address the students. The school was founded through a gift from the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

Housewife Plays Vital Part in British Economy

The British housewife is very much in the tforefront. She's being called in as the bottom of the barrel labor supply. And her opinions are being listened to with attention in all parts of the government. So revealed Margaret Bondfield, first woman cabinet minister of the British Isles, in a luncheon address yesterday before members of the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Not only is the British housewife answering the patriotic call to factories, but she's serving on housing committees putting in her unselfish stint in social welfare work as well as doing a bang-up job with volunteer organizations.

Miss Bondfield, who served as Minister of Labor in 1929, told how the educated women have joined dozens of welfare organizations to better the lot of the underprivileged in her country.

Miss Bondfield praised the Friends Society for their welfare work and put the members in the "saint" category. One of the most successful projects in Great Britain today is the training of home helpers, which are so badly needed.

She said that domestic help is being trained successfully in schools in the country. "Girls are selected for their ability to fit into a household," she explained. "Under the new training program the outmoded idea of mistress and slave girl fast is disappearing."

The dynamic former labor leader who worked her way from the lowest rung to the top of power in England emphasized that with the increase of mechanization and standardization, the development of the individual personality must be considered more and more. "We're in an age when we must recognize that the personality of the individual is of enormous importance," she averred. "Not yet have we recognized that we must give back to society some of the contributions we obtain from it. Some of the things that we can give back are our spiritual power and outpouring of personality.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, club president, introduced the speaker and recalled that she had first looked up Miss Bondfield Around 1917 upon the behest of Samuel Gompers, famous former American labor leader.

The former Minister to Norway, who also was the first president of the Woman's National Democratic Club, announced a fund drive to raise $10,000 to repair the roof of the organization's headquarters at 1526 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Bean Sees Forecasting Just as Tough in '52

Forecasters again will face difficulties in predicting the political trend in 1950 and 1952, Louis H. Bean, economist, writer and analyst declared yesterday. He addressed members of the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia yesterday at the organization's first postelection gathering in the Mayflower Hotel.

"Normally, the party in power tends to lose a few congressional seats in midterm elections," he explained, "but in 1950 much will depend on the business and price situation. It is conceivable that Republicans, studying the meaning of the 1946 and 1948 elections, will sense more clearly what most urban and rural voters really want in the way of prices, housing, health, TVAs, sustained full employment, purchasing power and social security."

He said that such a realization would have the effect of bringing the two major parties as closely together on domestic issues as they have been on foreign issues. "It would make life more difficult for forecasters but would redound to the benefit of the Nation," asserted Bean.

When asked to give his opinion on the failure of the polls to predict the outcome of the 1948 elections, Bean replied that his hunch is that the pollsters stopped polling at least 10 days too soon.

Wife's Character, Once Deplorable, Improves Due to Husband's Marvelous Understanding; But Women's Jealous Hostility Frightens Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You have helped me see many things more clearly, and I feel that your penetrating insight is backed by a true sense of justice; therefore I am emboldened to present my special problem, namely: other women's dislike or distrust of me.

To be truthful, my character was quite deplorable until a few years ago; but with the help of my husband's marvelous understanding I have managed to improve a great deal, I think. My best friends tell me they notice a change, but still I seem to attract hostility from women.

Gerald is very popular, we have good friends, and because of his position I have to go to social gatherings quite often. Also at times I must go alone to represent him and sometimes I have noticed that women seem to hate me.

Women Glare as Men Act Courtly

EVEN my sister-in-law seems to be jealous, although I give her no cause to be; and all this makes me feel rather badly, as I have no ill will towards anybody. I seem to attract men without trying to, and should I try to avoid them hereafter, or just let social interchange happen as it will?

Sometimes I don't dare prolong a conversation with a man, as anyone normally would at a cocktail party or concert intermission, for fear his wife or friend will be offended; and although I wonder at times if I should care what people think, I immediately feel that I hate to hurt anyone's feelings.

Won't you please tell me what attitude I should take towards people in general? Sometimes I am so confused that I can't sleep for hours after going to bed.
C. F.

Two-Part Problem: Personal and Social

DEAR C. F.: It appears that you have two problems here, one subjective and the other social; each playing upon the other in a vicious circle that aggravates both and progressively involves you in a tightening mesh of neurotic anxiety.

One problem has to do with your ingrained guilt-charged devaluation of self, an habitual refrain in your feeling and thinking; and the second has to do with other women's fear of your magnetic appeal to men, especially as combined with your earlier history of "deplorable" character—by which you mean reckless behavior, I assume.

Hate is a derivative of fear and usually refers to anticipated injury. Resentment, another derivative of fear, usually refers to damage done at some past time; and most people (unaware of their emotional components) have a lot of both forms of stymied anxiety dammed-up in their unconscious.

Critics Advertise Their Own Neuroses

LOVE, in the good-will sense, is a derivative of psychological and social well-being, which in turn derives from habitual conditioning in self-respect and emotional security. And as Scripture says, perfect love casts out fear. Further, it overflows in "charity," in that compassionate regard for one's fellowmen that is akin to love.

All of which is preliminary to saying that women who register "hate" (i.e., fear) of you, presumably for what you are or have been, are thereby advertising (to those who have insight) their own private hell of chronic resentful misgivings about their emotional security, personal value or loveworthiness. And you, on the receiving end of their anxious venom, guiltily feel you've got it coming to you, when in truth it reflects their problem, their spiritual disorder.

Thus for advice: read the significance of their behavior aright, dismiss it from consciousness, compassionately, and never let it blight your normal affability. This will be progress, but even so, it still doesn't get at your primary problem, to-wit, a frightened guilt-complex, and for guidance in dissolving that, I recommend study of Rabbi Joshua Loth Liebman's great book, "Peace of Mind" (Simon & Schuster, publishers).

Diabetes in the Family Tree Should Prompt More Diet Care

By Ida Jean Kain

DIABETES is increasing at an alarming rate. For every four known diabetics, there are three unknown. Statistics would seem to prove that many of the unsuspected cases will be blood relatives of a diabetic, for this condition is hereditary.

Next in importance among the factors which predispose to diabetes is overweight. This does not mean that overweight can cause diabetes, but overeating and overweight often precede diabetes. About 8 out of 10 adults who develop diabetes are overweight or have been overweight.

If there is any history of diabetes in your family, be on the alert. The best precautions are to keep your weight near normal and not to overindulge in sweets. This does not mean only to avoid candy and rich desserts and ice cream confections. It means to restrict the starchy foods, for all starch is converted into sugar. For example, one slice of bread is equal to three teaspoons of sugar, one small potato the same, and a soft drink is equal to four teaspoons of sugar. The less load put on your pancreas, the better. And that goes for everyone, but particularly for those with an inherited tendency to diabetes.

While there are many symptoms which indicate an inability on the part of the body to utilize sugar properly, I always shy off giving symptoms. I vividly recall that back in ou medical dietetics class, practically every dietitian suspected she had every condition described! But since there are so many undetected diabetics, and since so much can be done through diet to help ward it off, here are the known indications:

Common Symptons

MOST common are the "poly" symptoms, meaning excessive—excessive thirst, appetite and urination. The thirst is nature's means of trying to dilute the sugar and pass it out of the system, since the pancreas cannot handle it. That is what diabetes is—an inability to take care of carbohydrates (starch and sugar) in a normal way.

A good appetite is ordinarily associated with good health and this often keeps a person from going to the doctor. Hunger is a symptom, for although a large amount of food is eaten, much of it is not utilized so the person is ravenously hungry.

Among the common symptoms is susceptibility to boils. Less well-known symptoms are repeated infections, including colds, and fatigue and neuritis, with tired muscles that ache.

The term "cumulative" is sometimes used with this condition. Diabetes may be coming on for years, but without resognition and treatment there may be more symptoms at 40 than at 30.

Why diabetes is on the increase is not known. No doubt our sedentary habits contribute to it, as well as the high sugar intake and tendency toward overweight.

It would pay anyone with an inherited tendency to have a glucose tolerance test made. This test should be made after a hearty meal. And since there can be an unknown history of diabetes in the family, any big eater who is overly fond of sweets would do well to have a check-up by a good medical man.

This up-to-the-minute information on diabetes was obtained in Boston where your dietitian had an opportunity, during the convention of the American Dietetic Association, to hear and talk with many eminent authorities on diabetes.

Helpful Hints for the Homemaker . . .

If you find yourself with a minute to spare while you are getting your husband's breakfast, try holding your hands high above the steaming coffee pot—low enough to dampen them but not low enough to burn—and then rubbing in hand lotion when your hands are warm and moist.

Brush woolen garments thoroughly before sending them to the cleaner, or spot cleaning them at home. A brisk brushing removes much of the dirt and dust.

Embroidery needles have longer eyes than regular sewing needles and can often be threaded by people with poor vision who cannot manage the small-eyed needles. They are equally easy to sew with.

A Touch of Garlic

Pungent Herb of Lily Family Keeps Lily Pons' Voice Clear

By Sonia Stein

WHEN tiny coloratura Lily Pons steps out on the stage of Constitution Hall tonight, she will undoubtedly be a vision of pure delight from the tips of her size three slippers to the crown of her "mocha blonde" hair. But there will be a slightly delicatessen air about her.

For the lovely lady plans to eat garlic three times today—in an omelet for breakfast, in a salad for lunch and in soup for dinner. It's part of her system for warding off colds.

Her primary move in this routine is to shut off the radiator in the Lily Pons Suite at the Raleigh Hotel where she is staying to keep the heat from drying out her throat. She will spend the day in bed (with an electric pad for warmth) and emeerge in time to dress for the concert in a confection of white organza and black net sprinkled with tiny black brilliants, which Nina Ricci designed for her in Paris. Tonight will be the gown's public debut.

After the concert, for the reception in her honor at the French Embassy, Miss Pons will change to a period gown of ruby taffeta with a bustle back, which Maggie Rouff designed.

Considered a fashion leader, although she is barely 5 feet tall, Miss Pons requires more of her concert gowns than high style. Since they are her "working clothes" they must fill very specific requirements; they must be comfortable for moving and breathing, adaptable enough to suit both grand opera and folk song selections on the same program, and above all, spectacular enough to help the tiny singer fill a big stage.

"It does us all good to do a bit of self-analysis so that we choose clothes which enhance rather than dwarf our good points.

"We have to be our own worst critics,' 'said Miss Pons. "Too often a woman buys a dress which looked well on another woman, but admiring glances just don't come her way. She gives the illusion of wearing 'canned' styled clothes," she explained.

For her train trip from New York—she hasn't traveled by plane since Grace Moore lost her life in a plane crash—she wore a medium brown coat by Schiaprelli, with a black fringed shawl of Malenciaga's over it. The shawl doubles for evening wear, Miss Pons said.

Miss Pons' mother, Mme. Marie Pons of Cannes, France, is enjoying her first trip to Washington with her daughter. Also very fashionable, she wore a black Persian lamb coat and black hat with dark rose ostrich plumes and coarse veiling.

Miss Pons' hat was a tiny black affair with cocoa brown veiling, showing off the short hairdo somewhat recently acquired. For many years she wore her hair in a long page boy; now it is as short as a grace note and quite as becoming.

Ann's Washington "Pie"

1 cup sugar
1 egg, well beaten
2 cups sifted cake flour
¼ tsp. salt
2 tsps. Double Acting Rumford Baking Powder
¾ cup milk
1 tsp. vanilla

Cream shortening, add sugar gradually, creaming until light and fluffy. Beat in egg. Add Rumford Baking Powder (no alum) and other sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk and vanilla; beat thoroughly. Rumford gives you quicker, easier beating batter . . . and your cake stays fresh longer. Pour into two greased 8-inch layer pans. Bake in moderately hot oven (375°F.) for 25 minutes. Cut cooled layers crosswise making four layers. Fill layers with raspberry jam; dust top of cake with powdered sugar.

Let Them Go Gaily, Author Advises

CATHERINE TURLINGTON

EACH year in the life of a growing family might seem to it the most momentous. But Catherine Turlington, author of the recently published "Three to Make Ready," sees as perhaps the most special year the one just before the fledglings leave the nest—when the family circle faces its first break, as teenagers set off for college and their much-talked-of lives of their own.

In portraying such a year, Mrs. Turlington drew heavily on source material at the big rambling house at 42 Warwick pl., Chevy Chase, Md., where she lives with her husband, Edgar Turlington, an attorney, and their three daughters. The author insists the book is not autobiography, but—coincidentally, two of her daughters are now away at college, and the third will go next fall. Also, coincidentally—the family has a Dalmatian, as in the book.

Don't Hang on to Them

Underneath Mrs. Turlington's amusing picture of the daily comedies and near-tragedies of typical American family life is expressed the chief philosophy she has about young people. It is—don't hang on to them when the time comes to let them go. That, she admits, is not easy for parents. The adjustments mothers and fathers have to make in setting their children free are portrayed lightly, gaily and at times tenderly in her book.

A former newspaper woman, Mrs. Turlington gave up a regular job when she married. She continued some of her news activities when her children were small, but then stopped writing for 12 years to keep up with the strenuous activities of her family.

Sketches of Crises

Two years ago she wrote for a newspaper some sketches of the small crises of family life. "Why don't you send them to a publisher?" asked her friends. She did. The publisher wrote back, suggesting they be made the nucleus of a book.

Writing the book was not an easy task. Besides doing all her own work and looking after the Dalmatian, Mrs. Turlington has a vegetable garden, and even cans tomatoes. Interruptions in her daily schedule are so many that she did not attempt to set aside a time to write—just did it when she got the chance. She also wrote after the family had gone to bed at 10:30, sometimes working through until 3 in the morning.

How Do You Do It?

To the constant question, "How did you ever write a book and do everything else?" she replies, "Merely by being the kind of person who's more interested in putting fresh flowers on the mantel than in chasing dirt off the chair rungs."

Her writing was done in the big Turlington study adjoining the even larger living room. The Turlingtons bought the house because they thought the daughters should have plenty of room in which to have parties, and the parents should have a place in which to take refuge on date-nights instead of having to go to bed or to the movies.

Several months before Mrs. Turlington started her book her husband brought home a new unabridged dictionary—the old one having fallen to pieces partly from being used to press flowers. "I wasn't a bit nice about it," she says, "because we needed a new rug, some salad forks, well virtualy everything a house could need. But it turned out that I used the dicionary more than anyone else. In fact it was my chief collbortor."

Nap for Mother

Young children need an afternoon nap. But they may not be the only ones. If mothers have to be up early in the morning after getting up during the night to see that the baby is covered, they too, are fit subjects for a good rest in the middle of the day.

Sometimes it seems there is so much to do that a nap just can't be fitted in. Usually it will pay to rest for a little while, at least. One is less apt to feel fatigued, cross, and snappy with the children.

Often, too, youngsters are much more willing to take a nap if they know mother is resting, too. It doesn't seem to be quite so one-sided as when they must rest while the grown-ups appear to be doing as they please.

It will grow on you if you lie down regularly after lunch whether you feel like it or not. And again, naps do wonders in preventing irritability.

About Protecting Leather-Topped Table

We have just been given a leather-topped coffee table. Could you tell me the best way to prevent harm to the leather surface, both from glass rings and scratches? J. B. V.

Waxing the table top (either with ordinary liquid wax or a special wax preparation made for leather) will help greatly in preventing injury to the surface. Another idea would be to have a piece of glass cut to fit the table top exactly. Whether this would be practical or attractive in this particular case depends upon the way the table is made and other factors.

Our ice box had been stored for three years. Now it continues to have a "closed up" odor even after defrosting and airing. What can I do? A. G.

There is on the market a product containing charcoal and made especially for absorbing refrigerator odors. This can be purchased where housewares are sold.

Will you suggest ideas for a party for 20 teen-agers, 15, 16 and 17 years of age? I would like to keep the refreshments light. B. T. B.

Since a party for teen-agers seems to center around the food, your party will really be more of a success if you will provide plenty of it. It doesnn't need to be fancy, but it should be abundant. On the dining room table you could place the fixings for sandwiches—sliced meats, cheese, lettuce, mustard, mayonnaise and two or more kinds of bread. With this, provide soft drinks on ice. If you wished to have something sweet to top it off, you could set out a large cake or a plate of doughnuts. Let the young people serve themselves.

PETUNIA!

Festive? Yes'm?
Easy? Very!

In every ice-cube,
Freeze a cherry!

And if you'll add a tiny sprig of mint to each one, Petunia, you'll have something especially gay!

Bishop-Bracken

The evening could be spent playing games such as "20 Questions," Charades, or the games currently being enjoyed by the group. If there's space, they probably would enjoy dancing, too.

What is the best solution to use in washing a white hand-crocheted bedspread? Could you tell me how to make the bedspread stiff? I've heard there is a sugar solution used for this. I. A. M.

Use a mild flaked soap and lukewarm water to wash the bedspread. Add enough soap to the water to make a rich suds and completely dissolve the soap in the water before placing the bedpread into it. Because of its size, it would be much easier to use a washing machine to do the job. I would suggest you use a light starch solution to make it stiff rather than the sugar solution. Follow the proportions for light starch which are given on the starch package.

Can you tell me how to soften very stiff and harsh brushes of nylon or some like material? Soaking for days in water, initially hot or warm, and renewed from time to time has had little effect. They were intended for cleaning dental fixtures. E. G.

There seems to be no satisfactory way to soften these bristles which would not harm the brush.

We have been using on top of our electric refrigerator a black rubber mat as a protector. We have never set anything hot nor cold on it. Now, we find the mat has left black marks. Have tried to remove them by washing with a mild soap and vinegar, but we have not succeeded. How would you advise us to remove them? J. W. B.

Try rubbing the marks with a soft cloth dampened with cleaning fluid. If this doesn't remove them, dust some fine scratchless cleaning powder onto a soft cloth and rub them. Unless the black color has penetrated the surface, this should remove it.

Questions and contributions to the "Ask Anne" column should be in written form. We sincerely regret that time does not permit handling these on the telephone. Address letters to Anne, Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C.

Symphony Merger Idea Loses Ground

Washington opinion seems to be veering away from a merger of the National and Baltimore Symphony Orchestras, according to sources close to the National Symphony.

Frank Jelleff, vice president of the National Symphony, said: "There would be many insurmountable obstacles to be overcome before such a merger could be accomplished. Personally I don't see any possibility of such a change for the coming season. Our plans are all laid for our campaign and are being made for the next season. I am delighted at the wonderful enthusiasm already growing for the campaign."

Outside Contributions

Speaking about possible contributions from Baltimore in the event of a merger of the orchestra, Emerson Meyers, a member of the National board, offered an alternative. He said: "The National Symphony will always be glad to receive contributions from its sister cities. It will also be happy to play as many concerts for them as they wish."

Paul Schwartz, president of Local 161, American Federation of Musicians, recalled early attempts to found a symphony in Washington. He said:

"Reginald de Koven sank a personal fortune into the Philharmonic Orchestra trying to establish a symphony here." (De Koven conducted his orchestra in Washington from 1902 to 1905.) Schwartz spoke of another unsuccessful attempt to maintain a resident orchestra in recalling the name of Heinrich Hammer. Hammer led the Washington Symphony Orchestra in 1908.

For Local Orchestra

Schwartz said: "It would be a pity to try to merge the two orchestras when the National Symphony has been going on its own for so long. It has been able to employ men and provide music for Washington and we ought to do everything we can to keep a local orchestra. Of course, if the National Symphony were right on the rocks, then, as a last resort, it might be necessary to talk about merging with Baltimore."

He urged that more attention be given to concerts for children, an item which has been stressed by Hans Kindler, the symphony's founder and present conductor, and Howard Mitchell, the conductor-elect.

"Everyone needs to have their taste for music cultivated," Schwartz continued. "Concerts for children are of the greatest importance. If any merger were to be tried, it would be very hard to work out dates for concerts for school children in both cities."

Mrs. Philip Strong, publicity chairman for the women's committee of the orchestra, said she did not think a merger would be considered seriously at present.

"There is so much enthusiasm right now for the coming campaign that we should not be thinking about anything but doing the best job we can with our own orchestra right here in Washington," she declared.

Youth Better Now, Insists Authoress

The youth of today is "much better" than that of a generation ago, and oldsters need not worry about reports of "heavy drinking and heavy petting among teenagers.

This is the view of Mrs. Catherine Turlington, of Washington, who says she is "not an author who keeps house, but a housekeeper who wrote a book."

She discussed her recently published book, "Three to Make Ready," yesterday at the Arts Club of Washington, 2017 I st. nw., which is holding a New Book Fair.

The fact that she has three teenage children herself, plus the nature of her book, has made her appear as " an authority on youth," Mrs. Turlington said. She denied that she "knows anything about it," but insisted that only the spectacular characters of that age receive attention nowadays.

Stories of excessive drinking and "heavy petting" concern the small minority, she believes.

The fair will be open to the public from 2 to 6 and from 8 to 10 p. m. each day this week. Saturday, the last day, will be children's day from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Other speakers will be Ann Y. Barley, author of "Patrick Calls Me Mother," today at 4 p. m., and Maj. Andrew Geer, USMC, author of "The Sea Chase," at 6:30 p. m.; Virgil Carrington Jones, author of "The Hatfields and the McCoys," at 4 p. m. Wednesday, and Pat McGreer, author of of "Catch Me If You Can," at 8:30 a. m.; David C. Mearns, editor of "The Lincoln Papers," 8:15 p. m. Thursday; Francis Coleman Rosenberger, editor of "The Virginia Reader," and Bascom Timmins, author of "Garner of Texas."

Story hours for the children will be held at 1 p. m. and 3 p. m. Saturday.

Christmas Party Tonight

The Electrical Contractors Association will hold an "on the house" Christmas party at 8 p. m. today in the Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw. No business will be conducted and any electrical contractor, member or not, is welcome.

One on the Aisle—

Joe Brown Goes On Road Tonight

By Richard L. Coe

WHEN YOU GET HOME from your nightly trips to the movies this week, it wouldn't be a bad idea to switch your radio on to WTOP at 11:15.

Last night began a promising series on "You and the Theater," part of an over-all evening series the Columbia network has been calling "You and ——" whateveritis. The local boys have decently decided not to interfere with your trips to your favorite opium dens, which also makes telling you about the program easier for a theater reporter who'd rather sit in a theater than be stuffed with radios' erratic Kultur. Enough, however, of this digression.

Last night the series teed off with Meg Mundy, who rose overnight from a model to star in "The Respectful Prostitute," explaining the problems of "Breaking In." It wasn't overnight at all, according to Miss Mundy. She talked of opportunities for young people in the professional theater, of academic and pre-Broadway training, of odds for and against success for the theatrical newcomer.

Tonight Joe E. Brown, who's trekked the States for two years in "Harvey," will talk about "Road Companies." He'll touch on the physical work of touring, audiences in different regions, effects of the movies and radio on the theater outside New York.

Brown on Tomorrow

Wednesday night John Mason Brown will review "What's New on Broadway," a subject this reporter promises to tackle next Sunday after a Gotham weekend, though I wouldn't like that to keep you from listening to my godfather-in-law, John!

Thursday night promises something that may excite special interest in this theaterless town. Frederic McConnell, director of the Cleveland Playhouse, will talk on "The Community Theater." He'll examine its role as a social, artistic and educational factor in community life, its development of fresh talent and the status of the theater outside New York.

Friday night Russel Crouse will close the series, giving some rules on "Picking a Hit." He'll analyze the business and of theater and some of the Broadway pitfalls which he calls "delightful ways to lose a bankroll." As coauthor of the current "Life With Mother," he's in a good position to be cheerful.

Yes, Columbia's idea sounds like a novel way to end a day in a theaterless town.

CHARITY, it takes, to get out a newly recorded disc album these days To effect an album from Sam Goldwyn's "A Song Is Born," now at Keith's, the American Federation of Musicians has waived its rules for the three-record set to be sold as a benefit of the Damon Runyon Memorial Fund for cancer research . . . Not only that, Victor and Columbia have agreed to let Louis Armstrong, and Tommy Dorsey record for the rival Capitol firm . . . The result is a three-disc album from the Keith soundtrack, including Charlie Barnet and his band doing "Redskin Rhumba," the Page Cavanaugh Trio doing "Daddy-O," with Jeri Sullivan, and the picture's title song with the whole batch of musicos — Benny Goodman, Tommy Dorsey, Mel Powell, et al.

JAZZ, too, takes over the AVC Clubhouse at 1751 New Hampshire ave., Friday night when the general public is invited to a "Jazz Forum." . . . The short-hairs you can count on seeing include Sterling Brown, Emerson Parker, Willis Conover, Granville Hurley, Thomas Williston, Roy Carew and All Tannen.

NORMAN KRASNA seems to be the collegiate world's favorite playwright . . . His latest, "John Loves Mary," has just been done by the GW University Players . . . Tonight his first, "Dear Ruth," starts a two-night run in the Clendenen Gym at Massachusetts and Nebraska aves. . . . Tickets at the Willard Hotel agency.

THE MASQUERS of Roosevelt Center will offer their first play of the season tomorrow night at 8:30 in Roosevelt Auditorium, 13th and Upshur . . . "Village Green," a comedy of politics in a small New England town by Carl Allensworth is the play.

"THE BIRDS" will continue its run through the 18th, Sunday excepted, in the Catholic University speech and drama theater, a review of which will be squeezed into these columns shortly . . . Walter Kerr has adapted the Aristophanes comedy about a Utopian idea into modern lingo, with all the stops out on the Greek's comic gestures.

Airline Loses Court Plea for Back Mail Pay

By S. Oliver Goodman

Capital Airlines yesterday lost appeal for $5,300,000 in retroactive mail pay.

The United States Court of Appeals here upheld a Civil Aeronautics Board order that CAB ould not consider the request because Capital did not act within 15 ays after the final mail rate had een fixed. Capital (formerly ennsylvania-Central Airlines) had sked the additional pay for the eriod from June 1, 1942, to January 13, 1947, on the ground that was needed to assure a 10 per ent profit on investment.

In an opinion written by Justice ames M. Proctor, the three-judge ourt said the Civil Aeronautics ct "with its regulatory provisions is not intended to underwrite rofitable operations of a carrier's usiness, any more than statutes mposing regulation of public utilies are intended to insure them net revenue."

The decision does not affect another application filed by Capital January 14, 1947, for increased ail pay beginning on that date.

The Washington-based airline ecently reported a net deficit of 1,547,413 for the first 10 months this year.

PREMIUMS DOWN: The Wall Street Journal in a special survey of 16 cities reports that premium prices have shrunk on "new-used" autos. The financial publication priced new-used models of each make—those with less than 1000 miles of service. Regular (dealer-delivered) prices of the same models then were obtained in the respective cities. The table below averages the findings and shows the "national" premium or discount at which each make was selling in November:

List Weathers Mild Selling, Ends Higher

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Stocks managed to stay slightly higher today after the market weathered some mild selling pressure.

Trading was against a background of the rising market of last week, the best since the election, and domestic and international developments over the weekend, all considered favorable.

A steady opening improved gradually until stocks hit rough going late in the day. Gains of fractions to around a point faded away bit by bit until the list presented an irregular picture, about a point in either direction above and below the line.

The last hour, however, uncovered support that placed prices slightly higher on average.

Oils held their gains most of the day with Skelly up 2 at 116 and Barnsdall up 2 to 45, a new high this year. Atlas Corp. entered a bid of 45 for some 200,000 shares of Barnsdall to add to the 500,000 already held. Floyd B. Odlum, Atlas president, said the bid would be retained until the first of the year or until the shares were acquired.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Mon.	Sat.
Advances	457	461
Declines	341	125
Unchanged	256	205

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced .1 of a point to 64.5. The industrial componenet of the average gained .3 of a point, rails were unchanged and utilities were off .1 of a point.

The volume of trading was 1,180,000 shares. The bulk of that was chalked up during the periods of a rising market, and it was noted that the pace of trading slackened on the dips—a characteristis of the market in recent days.

Potomac Edison Awards Bond, Stock Issues

Potomac Edison Co. announced that $5,500,000 in first mortgage and collateral trust bonds were awarded yesterday to Halsey, Stuart & Co., of New York, on a bid of 101.868. The bonds bear a coupon rate of 3¼ per cent. Halsey, Stuart announced that the bonds will be offered to the public at 102.46.

At the same time, W. C. Langley & Co., Alex Brown & Sons and others were the successful bidders on 30,000 shares of preferred stock carrying a dividend rate of 4.7 per cent. It is to be offered to the public at $100 a share. Compensation for handling the issue is $3.20, netting the utility $96.80 a share.

The directors also authorized the sale of $1,500,000 in common stock, representing 75,000 shares, to the West Penn Electric Co.

Building Material Output Continues Near Record High

Production of building materials during September was the highest on record, topped only by the preceding month, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

The department's index of production for selected construction materials showed September output at 59.2 per cent above the 1939 monthly average. August had been 63.6 per cent above that average.

The decline from August to September was described by the department as "somewhat less than the normal" downturn for that season.

The index showed building material output for the first nine months of 1948 was running 6 per cent above the same period of 1947, indicating this year will top last year's record high figure.

San Francisco Firm Loses Broker License

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday ordered revocation of the broker-dealer registration of Hammill and Co., San Francisco, for violating the Federal Securities Act.

The commission announced on Sept. 21 that the film had violated the Federal regulations, but, at that time, SEC gave the company an opportunity to withdraw its registration. Permission to withdraw the registration was contingent upon Hammill and Co's. return, within 60 days, of approximately $16,600 to two customers.

In today's order, the commission said the payments had not been made and hence it was revoking the company's broker-dealer rights.

Insurance Firms' Competition Worries Investment Bankers

By Harry T. Montgomery

Hollywood, Fla., Dec. 6 (AP)—The growing tendency of the public to invest their savings with life insurance companies has been discouraging to the investment banking business, Julien H. Collins, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, said today.

In his main address to the association's thirty-seventh annual convention, Collins said:

"We have seen our prospective customers attracted by the highly developed sales efforts of the large life insurance companies, with the result that there is today a greater concentration of wealth under institutional control than ever before in history."

The investment banker's business is to handle the public's investing directly in industrial enterprises through the purchase of stocks and bonds. Added to the gloom prevailing over the state of their business, the assembled bankers were generally depressed by President Truman's reelection last month. Collins sought to point out some bright aspects of the election result as it affected investment bankers.

Declaring that in advance of the election it was not known "whether our meeting would be one of celebration or deliberation, or both," Collins said:

"For most of our members this year is one of deliberation, for it cannot be said that most people in the financial community have been heartened by the unexpected results."

He then pointed out that "we always have problems," no matter what party is in Washington. He listed among the favorable points that there are both conservatives and liberals in both parties, "that the President and the Congress are of the same party," that the foreign policy is bipartisan, and that the Democratic Party has the "same fundamental theories" as the Republican.

Cruelty to Child Wins Divorce Suit

The United States Court of Appeals granted a Hyattsville mother legal separation from her husband yesterday after she contended that cruelty to her children constituted cruelty to her.

Separation was granted to Mrs. Thelma Adams Kimmell, 33, of 22 Chillum rd., from Charles E. Kimmell, 41-year-old Navy Yard employe, on grounds of cruelty.

The Court of Appeals decision, written by Judge Bennett Champ Clark, rev ersed the District Court here. The lower court had given the mother custody of their twin children, now 4 years old, and ordered the father to pay $10 a week for their support, but had refused to grant a legal separation.

Judge Clark stated Mrs. Kimmell claimed "cruelty to the children is cruelty to their mother and that all of the evidence taken collectively constitutes ample ground for legal separation for cruelty."

"We agree with appellant in this respect," the opinion said.

Mrs. Kimmell had testified that her husband yelled at one of their teething children: "Shut up or I will bang you," the opinion said. She also claimed that he had struck her and the children.

"He would leap from his bed in a fit of temper, race across the room, raise his hand and strike the child so quickly that he never had any idea where the blow would fall," the mother charged.

Beavers Elected Bladensburg Fire Department Head

John E. Beavers, jr., has been elected president of the Bladensburg (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad, succeeding W. R. Beattie.

Other new officers are William G. Perry, chief; Lawrence Bayton, assistant chief; Albert Snyder, captain; Clarence Vincent, assistant chief in charge of rescue squad; Carl Stack, captain of rescue squad; Ralph Knight, fire marshal; Dudley M. Taylor, secretary; F. William Norgle, treasurer, and Henry G. Mercer, financial secretary. Both Norgle and Taylor were elected for the ninth year.

New directors include Beavers, Taylor, Mercer, Beattie, Perry, Vincent, Knight, Stanley Beavers, Robert Baldwin and Headley Gasch.

Falls Church Annexation Study Voted

A joint study of Falls Church annexation proposals by all citizens' associations in the area affected was proposed last night by the Tremont Garden Citizens Association.

At a meeting attended by representatives of six other civic groups, the association agreed to sponsor an interorganizational meeting next Monday night for formation of a permanent annexation study committee. The meeting place will be determined this week.

Decision to call in all civic groups of the section was made after the Tremont Gardens organization deferred a scheduled vote as to whether it would support the annexation move. Postponement of action came after statements by many present that the question should be weighed more carefully before a final vote is reached.

Other representatives of civic groups expressed opposition to annexation by Falls Church, on the ground that residents had sought rural homes because they "wanted no part of city life."

Citizens' associations represented at the meeting were Jefferson Village, Lee Boulevard Heights, Brilyn Park, Sleepy Hollow, Devonshire Gardens and Tyler Park.

Besides these groups, associations in the "annexation zone" which will be invited to join in the proposed study, are Greenway Downs, Fenwick Park, Beechtree Farms and Hillwood.

Health and Hospital Group Meets Monday

The executive committee of the health and hospital section of the United Community Services will meet at 3:30 p. m. Monday at the District Tuberculosis Association office.

Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, chairman of the group, said the committee will take up proposals made by members at the section's first meeting, last month.

New York Cotton

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Cotton futures made new highs for the current move in early trading today, but had a sharp setback at the end due to hedging and profit-taking. Final prices were 40 cents a bale lower to 10 cents higher.

Traders attributed the decline to technical reasons following the recent sustained advance in prices. The fact that nearby futures reached levels of almost two cents a pound above loan price, basis Memphis, also attracted hedging.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 6 (AP).—Corn took over the grain market leadership from wheat today. Buying from cash houses, local traders and commission firms sent the yellow cereal up for gains extending to nearly 2 cents. Other grains closed with small gains and losses.

At one time some persistent buying developed in wheat, and it sent the December contract to a new high since February 4 at 2.43. But the close was a good cent lower. The 1949 wheat contracts ended with fractional gains after being up more than a cent at one time.

Wheat closed ⅝ lower to ⅜ higher; corn was ¾-1⅜ higher; oats were ¼ lower to ¼ higher; rye was ½ to 1 cent higher; soybeans were ¾ lower to ¾ higher, and lard was 5 to 20 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Postlude

Coloratura's Vocal Gifts Need Polish

By Paul Hume

Carolyn Schulte, coloratura soprano, sang last night in the Phillips Gallery.

With accompaniments by Violet Breeding, Miss Schulte listed an interesting variety of songs and arias. Her voice is of pleasant natural texture, reaching up through an easy high C. In passages of less than full voice, the tone has a sweet color of good-carrying quality.

In old English folk songs and tender moments of "Il Faut Partir" from Donizetti's "Daughter of the Regiment," Miss Schulte conveys something of the assence of her texts. But in such noble laments as that of Arianna from Monteverdi's opera of that name she fails to penetrate into the real meaning of what she is singing.

Vocally gifted more than many singers today, last night's artist would profit to spend all her time on perfecting an even scale from bottom to top of her range. To this she should add nuances of infinite shading in both rhythm and tone quality. Her languages also need polish. Spanish, French, Italian and English all suffer from a lack of real definition of vowel sounds.

Such a singer as this can acquire many vital points from studying the phonograph records of Maggie Teyte, Lotte Lehmann, Lucrezia Bori and others, whose greatness has come through years of painstaking care.

Police Explore Theory Blow Killed Scheer

Police yesterday continued their investigation of the death of Charles N. Scheer, 48, owner of a clothing store for men at 1100 N. Capitol st., on the theory that he had suffered a fatal blow during a robbery.

Homicide officers said the wallet Scheer usually carried with him was missing. They said they had no idea of the amount of money it might have contained. Scheer's family has stated that he carried very little cash with him, while others have reported he had a "goodly" sum, according to police.

Scheer died of a fractured skull last Saturday, six days after he was found seriously ill and suffering nausea in his store. At the time his illness was discovered, he told several persons that he had not been struck but merely felt ill.

Might Have Forgotten Blow

The faractured skull was not discovered until he was X-rayed at George Washington Hospital, where he was admitted that night. He lapsed into unconsciousness shortly after he was admitted to the hospital and never regained consciousness before his death. He did not mention robbery when he complained of being ill.

Medical authorities, however, agree that he could have been attacked, then acted normally for hours without rememberg that he had been struck. Police have found no one who can account for the hours between 1:45 p. m. when Scheer apparently felt all right, and 4:30 p. m., when he first complained of being ill. They believe that if he was attacked, it must have been between those hours.

Plank Examined

A 2 by 4 plank, found in Scheer's store, is being examined for any traces indicating it had been used to strike Scheer.

Yesterday a coroner's jury was sworn in, but no date has yet been set for an inquest.

Funeral services for Scheer were held yesterday at the Goldberg funeral home. He was buried in Beth Sholom Cemetery.

Late Poll Tax Payers Must Pay Penalty

Residents of Virginia cities and towns who did not pay poll taxes by the legal deadline yesterday may still vote in next spring's local elections if they pay by December 13.

The $1.50 tax, however, must now be accompanied by an 8-cent penalty.

In northern Virginia this pertains to residents of Alexandria, Falls Church and Herndon where councilmen and other local officers will be chosen at an April 5 primary and June 14 general election.

All Virginia voters must pay the 1948 poll tax by May 7 if they wish to vote in the August 7 primary and the November 8 general election in which a governor, members of the House of Delegates and other State officials will be elected.

Taxes should be paid at the office of the city or county treasurer.

Guidance Association To Meet on Wednesday

The Guidance and Personnel Association of the District will meet at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the auditorium of the Archives Building at 8th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Dr. Irene Cooperman of the Veterans Administration advisement and guidance division will discuss group methods in vocational guidance, and Dr. Jarl E. Dyrud, psychiatrist for the Veterans Administration mental hygiene clinic will talk about mass psychotherapy. Ralph G. Price of the State Department's International Information Office will speak on the motion picture as a guidance tool, in conjunction with the showing of a film, "Journey Into Medicine."

$10 Limit Put On Inaugural Parade Seats

The 1949 Inaugural Committee budget subcommittee decided yesterday to stick to a $10 ceiling on parade tickets.

Members agreed, at a meeting in the Riggs Bank boardroom, to sell about 10,000 tickets at $6, $8 and $10 and to release the remainder—some 30,000—for $2 to $4.

The committee received bids for construction of inaugural parade reviewing stands but withheld acceptance pending a possible revision in specifications by District Construction Director Archie Hutson.

A low bid of $82,000 was submitted by the J. D. Medin Construction Co., 820 Michigan ave. ne. Other bids were Skinker & Garrett, 1719 I st. nw., $95,950; Whalen & Spradlin, 930 K st. nw., $104,173; and Jeffress-Dyer, Inc., 908 20th st. nw., $139,250.

The committee authorized an arrangement with Lloyds of London for protection against loss in case an emergency causes a last-minute cancellation.

The Government department ticket sales committee, at another meeting, was informed that 15,000 seats will be made available for Government employes.

Melvin D. Hildreth, 1949 Inaugural Committee chairman, told the Government department ticket sales committee he was "amazed" at the number of requests already received and urged them to get department requests in early.

McNeil Sworn For Police Trial Board

George E. McNeil, former president of the District Bar Association, yesterday was sworn in as a member of the Special Police Trial Board.

The ceremony, in which 18 other Washington lawyers were sworn in as alternates, was held at the Municipal Center. Inspector Robert C. Pearce, chief clerk of the Police Department, gave the oath.

McNeil or one of the alternates will serve as a third member of the trial board to hear cases resulting from the complaint of citizens. The other two members will be a police inspector and a captain. Policemen, facing charges brought by a member of the force, will still be heard by a trial board of three police officers.

The alternates to the special board are Hilary W. Costello, Fred J. Icenhower, Richard L. Tedrow, Northcutt Ely, Ralph Stein, Allen J. Krouse, James C. Toomey, Roger Ratcliff, James A. Cobb, Charles H. Houston, Augustus W. Gray, William A. Powell, William C. Hueston, Frank D. Reeves, Emory B. Smith, Austin Fickling, Maurice R. Weeks and Wesley S. Williams.

Court Affirms Death Penalty

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed the rape conviction of Theodore M. Holmes, who is scheduled to die January 15 in the electric chair for an attack on a 9-year-old girl near the National Arboretum last March 18.

Holmes, 22-year-old North Carolina convict, was convicted of carnal knowledge May 20 in District Court before Judge Edward Curran by a jury that recommended the death penalty.

Judge Bennett Champ Clark wrote the Appellate Court opinion declaring:

"We find nothing whatever in the record to remotely justify reversal . . . The record discloses one of the most abhorrent and bestial crimes which has ever been presented to this court. We do not feel it necessary to discuss the record in all its horrible and heart-rending details. . . ."

The court held Judge Curran was not in error in permitting the child to sit on her mother's lap when testifying. The defense contended that might have tended to inflame the jurors. The higher court pointed out the child was on crutches, and with her leg in a cast, as a result of the attack, and her foot muscles were paralyzed.

The girl was found unconscious in a ravine a few hundred feet from her home in the 2600 block of Morris pl. ne. and was in critical condition for some time.

"What might have inflamed the jury was the pitiable condition of the little girl herself and it would doubtless have inflamed them (the jurors) more if she had been unable to sit in the witness stand comfortably by herself, or had been compelled to stand on crutches with her leg in a cast while testifying," the court added.

The opinion praised the manner in which Holmes' court-appointed attorney, Maurice R. Weeks, conducted the defense "with energy and devotion" in what it called "a truly irksome duty."

Judges Henry W. Edgerton and Wilbur K. Miller heard the appeal with Judge Clark.

Keough Given The Pallium

Baltimore, Dec. 6 (AP). — Archbishop Francis Patrick Keough of Baltimore was invested with the archbishop's pallium at a solemn pontifical mass in the cathedral today.

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, came from Washington to make the presentation.

Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle of Washington headed the delegation of high churchmen participating in the ceremonies.

Rep. Bulwinkle Better, Naval Hospital Reports

Officials of the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, Md., reported yesterday that the "general condition" of Representative Bulwinkle (D., N. C.) is improved.

For Annual Dinner

Legendary Minnesotan Reaches D. C.

Paul Bunyan, the Northwest's legendary superwoodsman blew into town, yesterday—or such is the story of the Minnesota State Society, "sponsors" of his monthlong visit.

Informed that the mighty Minnesota lumberjack will be around till January 7, when he appears as guest of honor at a Minnesota State Society dance, the District Commissioners plumped out their largest welcome mat.

In a letter signed "In strictest frivolity," Commissioner John Russell Young wrote the State society that "the Engineer Commissioner is considering reinforcing all the streets with an additional over-all 2 feet of concrete to sustain Paul's great weight."

"We will have copies of the Congressional Record for the past 20 years to assure Paul some interesting reading during his leisure moments," Commissioner Young stated.

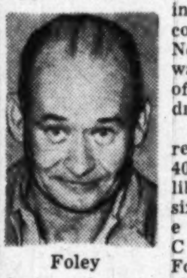
He added that "the Fire Department has been alerted to divert two of its highest tower trucks to assure adequate drinking facilities for Paul. The two streams of water will be crossed 500 feet in the air to provide a trickling fountain at chest level for him."

A "Tall Tales Contest" open to anyone in the Washington area over 18 and sponsored by the Brainerd Civic Association of Brainerd, Minn., is being held in conjunction with the Bunyan visit.

Original talees of Bunyan exploits under 500 words in length and dealing with the Minnesota Brainerd Lake region, should be sent to the Minnesota State Society, Box 66, Benjamin Franklin Station, Washington, D. C., before December 20. Winner will receive a two-week free vacation in Minnesota.

Man Drowned Accidentally, Jury Finds

A coroner's jury yesterday found that the death of John Corrington, 38, a Detroit chemist who toppled from his motor launch into the Anacostia River November 27, was the "result of an accidental drowning."



Foley

The verdict, returned after 40 minutes' deliberation by a six-man jury, exonerated Charles W. Foley, a resident engineer at Hotel Fairfax, who had been held for the inquest.

Witnesses testified both Corrington and Foley had been drinking the night of the drowning.

William E. Cope, 21, a dental technician, whose boat was moored close to Corrington's at Buzzard Point Boat Club, testified he heard Foley "cursing" and saying "come on up here, I'll get you . . ."

When he arrived at Corrington's boat and asked Foley what was "wrong," the latter replied, "nothing," Cope testified.

Dr. Samuel W. Johnston, a Takoma Park dentist, who dragged Corrington's body from the river, told the jury bruises on the victim's face might have been incurred "during artificial respiration."

Sergt. Alfred E. Clarke, who questioned Foley several hours after the drowning, testified he "was still under the influence." He said Foley "at no time said there'd been an argument."

Inquest Set For Today in Police Killing

A coroner's inquest in the shotgun death of a policeman, and the death of his killer, who was in turn cut down by bullets, will be resumed at 11:30 a. m. today at the District Morgue.

The policeman, Corpl. Grady A. Beacham, 40, of the Ninth Precinct, was killed as he attempted to serve a warrant on Robert S. Wilkerson, 34, a former convict, of no fixed address, who was visiting in a house at 1601 Montello ave. ne. last Thursday.

Wilkerson was killed by the bullets either from the gun of Beacham, who fired twice before he died, or from the gun of another policeman, Pvt. Henry C. Womble, who was right behind Beacham and fired six shots.

The inquest was opened the next day, but was adjourned to await ballistic tests by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The results were sent yesterday to the police homicide squad but will not be made public until the inquest today.

Oil Stove Explosion Burns Prove Fatal

Pearl Davis, 48, seriously burned November 27 when an oil stove exploded at 1320 13th st. nw., died yesterday at Gallinger Hospital.

Three other persons were injured as a result of the explosion, James Byrd, 40, who with Mrs. Davis was showered with burning oil, were also admitted to Gallinger Hospital with serious burns. Miss Lottie Moore, 40, and her brother, Edward Moore, 45, received cuts and bruises when they tried to escape.

Concert Set Wednesday

The Montgomery Symphony Orchestra, sponsored by Montgomery County Junior College, will give a concert at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the Silver Spring Intermediate School. Among featured works will be Mozart's Jupiter Symphony and the "Evening Prayer" from Hansel and Gretel.

Fairfax Man Indicted on Tax Charge

Irvin Payne, Fairfax County businessman, was indicted by an Alexandria District Court grand jury yesterday, charged with evading $32,085 in Federal income taxes from 1942 to 1944.

His was one of 16 indictments returned at the start of the semiannual December court term.

Payne is a land developer and owner of a store at Baileys Crossroads, Va. He was not in court yesterday. Bond was set at $2000 and a United States marshal was to serve papers on him today.

The indictment said that Payne in 1942 had paid taxes on only $3561, while his actual income was $12,758. In 1943 he allegedly reported $4213 instead of $37,750; and in 1944, $4955 instead of $25,058.

Several Sentenced

In other actions yesterday, the court, with Judge Albert V. Bryan presiding:

Gave prison sentences in connection with the following indictments returned yesterday:

Charles Davis, jr., 23, 329 Virginia ave. sw., a year and a day for escaping from the District Workhouse at Occoquan, Va.

Willie Lee Johnson, 27, 10 I st. ne., a year and a day for escaping from the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va.

James R. Callis, 27, 4918 Chesterfield rd., Arlington, Va., a $250 fine and three years' probation for taking $15 from letters at the Alexandria Postoffice where he worked as a clerk.

Arthur W. Kibler, 32, 807 Jefferson st. nw., $100 fine and three years' probation for taking $9.75 from a letter at Fort Belvoir where he worked as a letter carrier.

Verlene C. Johnson, 19, 1000 Quaker lane, Alexandria, five years' probation for forging and cashing a $500 U. S. Savings Bond.

Virginia J. Weekley, 25, Rapidan, Va., two years' probation for using the mails with intent to defraud.

(2) Disposed of the following cases not acted on by the grand jury yesterday:

Herbert Hawes, 19, address unknown, a year and a day for escaping from the District Workhouse at Occoquan.

William D. Jordan, 27, 1013 Montgomery st., Alexandria, $100 fine and three years' probation for taking $36 from a drawer at the Del Ray branch postoffice in Alexandria. Jordan was a janitor at the postoffice, and a probation officer said he is now a janitor at Metropolitan Police Precinct No. 3 here.

William R. Kidd, 35, civilian employe at Fort Belvoir, fined $100 for discharging a firearm along a highway on a Government reservation.

Draft Cases Dismissed

(3) Dismissed charges on draft evasion by use of benzedrine against seven men after U. S. Attorney George Hummrickhouse said he had learned that the chemical tests made in these cases are not infallible. This would have no bearing on similar cases heard a year ago, he said, because different tests were then used.

(4) Received, but did not dispose of, these indictments:

Larceny on a Government reservation: Stephen S. Kelley, age and address unknown.

Using mails to defraud: Charles A. Ward, age and address unknown, two counts; case transferred to Richmond court.

Forging U. S. Savings Bond: Alberta Randall, 19, 910 Queen st., Alexandria.

Forging and cashing Federal tax refund check: Margaret W. Brown, 24, RFD 5, Alexandria.

Maintaining and operating an illegal still: Addie E. Dodson, 63, and Rufus M. Dodson, 58, both of Culpeper, Va. Also Robert Courtney, Pearl Courtney, Stuart B. Johnson and Roger Terry, ages and addresses unknown, all of whose cases will be tried in Richmond.

Theft from an interstate shipment: Charles Ward, jr., 28 203 6th st. ne.

Md. Canning Industry Aids Pollution Fight

The canning industry in Maryland has joined in the fight against river pollution and progress is beginning to show, the Chemical Engineers Club of Washington was told last night.

The Nation's industrial economy must not be impaired by driving industries away from the streams they pollute or forbidding new industries to locate on rivers, the experts agreed. The water pollution control bill passed by Congress last June 30 has already increased cooperation among all groups interested in solving the problem, speakers at the club's symposium in the Interior Department auditorium declared.

Dr. Abel Wolman, professor of sanitary engineering at Johns Hopkins University said antipollution interests in Maryland have at last united in a program that gives hope of an eventual solution of the problems of pollution by sewage and industrial wastes throughout the State, with the canning industry leading the way in cooperation with State and National authorities.

Other speakers were Frank C. Wachter of the Maryland Water Pollution Control Commission; L. D. Dworski, sanitary engineer of the U. S. Public Health Service, who outlined the organization for the pollution fight by Government agencies, and Lyman Cox, waste disposal consultant for the duPont Co. of Wilmington, Del.

Price of Peace

This date will never leave our minds . . . In all the years to be . . . Because it marks the fiendishness . . . Of hate and treachery . . . Just seven years ago today . . . Pearl Harbor was aflame . . . And our defense against the foe . . . Was pitiful and lame . . . We met the challenge and we fought . . . With bravery supreme . . . Until we won the war and we . . . Fulfilled another dream . . . But we were fortunate indeed . . . And we should be aware . . . That liberty is only ours . . . As long as we prepare . . . Pearl Harbor is a minor grief . . . Compared with things to come . . . If our defense must struggle with . . . A mere financial crumb.

What's the Verdict?

ENGAGEMENT RING

Q. A young man gave his fiancee an engagement ring. Later he gave her a fur jacket, and a three-year subscription to a homemaking magazine. When she insisted that he agree to support her invalid sister before she would go through with the marriage, he broke the engagement. Does she have to return the gifts?

A. An engagement ring is not a gift in the ordinary sense; usually it is a gift in contemplation of marriage. So if the engagement is broken by the girl, through no fault of the man, he is entitled to the ring. Since support of his wife's relatives is not a duty of a husband, the man can properly break the engagement and demand the ring. The fur jacket apparently is an outright gift, which he could not recover. The character of the magazine indicates it is a conditional gift, like the ring, which she ought to transfer to him. —F. L. THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

This Is Why It's Called "Filthy Lucre"

Police found $21,000 in an Iowa used car dealer's garbage can.

We all know that auto dealers are making lots of money, but I never suspected that they threw it away when it got dirty.

SHOPPER'S LAMENT

All our shops are now a-glitter
With the stuff of dreams-come-true;
But I know I can't afford them,
So I'll make my old dreams do.

HOW BIG IS "BIG?"

As a prospective purchaser of a television set (when they come down to $19.95) I've been reading the ads lately.

I notice that some video receivers have screens with an area of more than 100 square inches.

Being a whiz at square root, I can immediately envision a viewing surface of more than 10 inches by 10 inches.

Then I note that other sets have a "big 72-inch screen." That gets us down to a little over 8x8.

Other ads ask me to buy a set with a "big 52-inch screen." And I recall that 7 times 7 is 49.

Now, finally, I see that they're putting out one with a "full-sized 26-inch screen"— and that makes me wonder.

If over 100 square inches is "big," and 72 square inches is "big," and 52 square inches is "big," and 26 square inches is "full-sized"—what size screen is considered "small?"

NO FOOLING

Wherever I go, I find prohibitions; signs telling me all the things I can't do. Like this:

NO
DO NOT
NO SMOKING
DO NOT ENTER

Is it any wonder this generation feels regimented?

PIED TYPE DEPT.

This column seems to be developing some pretty good amateur proofreaders. Our pied-type department is working overtime.

Laurence A. Burkhart, jr., of 372 Sumner ave., 'way up in Springfield, Mass., notes that the Washington Caps whipped the Indianapolis Jets, "494 to 76." (For one edition, they were a whale of a ball club, weren't they, Larry?)

Ruth Austin of 1331 14th st. nw., did a double take while working one of our recent crossword puzzles.

We inadvertently left out the number "62" which should have preceded one of the definitions, with the result that "60 across" was defined as: "More fastidious Philippine termite."

Paula Ferguson of 1325 Fort Stevens dr. nw., forwards a classified ad which offers the biggest bargain of the week:

"ONE-ROOM bachelor apt., modern kitchen, air-cond., $375 goes with it."

Nancy Dickens of 4701 Addison rd., Kenilworth, Md., thinks that this bit of Hollywood publicity makes as much sense as most:

"Carolyn Butler has been assigned the feature role in the production, Lamour, Sterling Hayden and Dan 'Manhandled' which stars Dorothy Duryea."

Marie Kuhn of 1418 Spring rd. nw., points out a lost-and-found ad which got lost and wound up in the wrong section of the paper. Ellen R. Palmer of 4413 3d st. se., wonders how Navy managed to hold Army to a tie, because we referred to "the Navy squad of 7 players." H. Hatch of 1425 H st. nw., wants to know why the previous Saturday's football games were prominently displayed in our Monday's television listings.

One of our afternoon contemporaries announced in half-inch type that "Inaugural Seat Applications Almost 18 Tims Ahead of '40."

Jack Roadley of 1703 Harvard st. nw., thinks he can identify five of those 18 Tims: "Tim O' The Hay, Tim Bucktoo, Tim Kinbearing, Tim O'Shanter, and Tim Burr."

Mrs. Val Whitehouse of 418 N. George Mason dr., Arlington, Va., notes that our morning contemporary reports a Pentagon party with the line:

"There was enough gold brain on hand to trim a curtain." (Now I know where my brain was that day.)

Our own "Ask Anne" did an item about cooking utensils, but Mrs. William L. Pringle of 2701 Cortland pl. nw., finds that by the time the copy reached print, it referred to "cocktail utensils."

And even the youngsters get into the act. Katherine M. McDonald of 928 Wayne ave., Silver Spring, Md., is 15 years old and a sophomore at Montgomery Blair High School. She joins her elders in submitting this advice from our morning contemporary's beauty column:

"For soft white hands, bathe them once a week in a solution of lemon juice and warm weather."

Sounds like Florida Chamber of Commerce propaganda.

NEW YORK—The biggest radio talent deal in the history of the industry was the CBS purchase of the Amos 'n' Andy and Jack Benny shows. The deals were completed so quickly that NBC, the network which had been broadcasting these programs for many years, was taken unawares . . . NBC recently ordered thousands and thousands of tie-and-matching-scarf sets as Christmas gifts throughout the trade. The print-design on these sets listed the 10 high-ranking NBC stars. And 2 of the 10 on the list are Jack Benny and Amos 'n' Andy, which now belong to the rival CBS network.

Charles Luckman, head of Lever Bros., signed Amos 'n' Andy for a CBS Sunday night spot. The subsequent CBS raids on NBC's competing Sunday night programs increase the value of Luckman's contract . . . A few weeks ago Luckman took a hunting trip to a primitive place, without phone or electricity, 200 miles north of Phoenix, Ariz. A messenger, driving a battered car, arrived from Phoenix with a long message from Bill Paley, head of CBS. "They're keeping the wire from New York to Phoenix open, waiting for your answer," Luckman was told. He read the message, involving millions of dollars in radio talent, by candlelight.

Paley was asking whether Luckman would move his Amos 'n' Andy show to 8:30 Sunday nights, if CBS succeeded in buying NBC's Sunday night array of Jack Benny, Phil Harris and Edgar Bergen. Luckman, whose program will benefit by being sandwiched between these shows rather than by following them, had no pencil to write his reply. With a piece of charcoal from the fireplace, he wrote "no" on the back of Paley's message. And the messenger, bearing a note written in charcoal by candlelight, drove 200 miles back to Phoenix with the reply to Bill Paley in a deal involving radio, high finance and 1948 taxes.

Next month seven police officials from Israel will arrive in New York to spend three months of study at the New York Police College, as guests of Police Commissioner Wallander . . . A group of lawyers has sent detectives in search of a lady who sold cars to all of them. She didn't tell them that each car had a mortgage on it, took their money and skipped.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Keenan, Hirohito Have Chat

By Drew Pearson

Only a few years ago the imperial court doctor, feeling the pulse of the Emperor of Japan, placed silken gauze over his wrist. No mortal was allowed to touch the skin of his imperial majesty.

Keenan

And the court tailor, measuring the Emperor for a suit of clothes, stood halfway across the room and appraised him with his eye. He was not permitted to approach closer.

But a few days ago in Tokyo, a modern miracle took place when a Cleveland-Washington lawyer, Joseph B. Keenan, sent to Japan to prosecute Japan's highest war leaders, lunched with the Emperor of Japan.

Not only is the list of foreigners who have ever broke bread with the Emperor confined to two or three persons in all history, but it was significant that the Emperor should meet with the man who was much harsher in war crimes prosecution than the war courts of Nuernburg.

The Emperor made no mention of the war trials except to tell Keenan he hoped he would come to Japan again when he had "no disagreeable duties."

The main conversation—it lasted 2½ hours—was about Japanese-American friendship and the Emperor's hope for an alliance between the two countries.

Empress and Margaret Truman

The Empress was interested in Margaret Truman and her singing. The Emperor wanted to know all about President Truman, his hobbies, his policies and his miracle election. He was also eager to learn about the United States Senate, and wanted Japan's Diet to be like it.

He told how, prior to the war, he was worried over the rise of military men to power. Four civilian Premiers were murdered by the military, he reminded Keenan. From 1936 on, the army demanded that only an active army officer could serve as War Minister, which, said the Emperor, was the beginning of Pearl Harbor.

The Emperor did not speak English, but understood it. He was well dressed in European clothes, did not bow according to Japanese custom, but crossed the room and shook hands with Keenan. About 40 butlers served the luncheon guests of seven Japanese and one American. The luncheon was held in the imperial housekeeper's home, for the Emperor's palace, contrary to general belief, was badly bombed and has not been repaired.

Note—When Hirohito was about 20, an English-speaking Japanese Quaker, Renzo Sawada, was appointed as his companion. They traveled together through Europe, became good friends, and some of the Emperor's democratic ideas may result from this early association.

Negro Chairman

By an odd twist of fate the committee which the Republican Congress built up for the purpose of meat-axing the Truman Administration, will now be chairmanned by a Negro, Congressman Dawson of Chicago, Democrat.

Not only is this the first time in history that a Negro has sat as chairman of a congressional committee but he will sit at the helm of the House Expenditures Committee, one of the most powerful in Congress.

This committee can investigate almost anything under the sun—from European expenditures under the Marshall Plan to how the President spends his private allowance. There is almost no part of the executive branch of the Government that this committee cannot probe.

On it, because of its power, the Republicans placed their most disagreeable and tenacious meat-axers—Michigan's Clare Hoffman, Pennsylvania's Robert Rich, Oklahoma's Ross Rizley, and Clarence Brown of Ohio, Taft's campaign manager.

After January 3 these gentlemen not only are shorn of power but will be called to order by a quiet-spoken, modest Negro who is well liked even by his Southern colleagues.

However, perhaps because the role of a colored Congressman is not easy on Capitol Hill, the self-effacing Dawson has attended only two meetings of the Expenditures Committee, and only a score or so of rollcalls on the House floor in the last two years. Most of the time he has spent in his own office or in Chicago.

Result is that Dawson may be tragically unprepared to handle this highly important committee. Second in command, however, is California's Chet Holifield, a shrewd, tough Democrat who knows committee operations from A to Z. Without race prejudice, Holifield will sit at Dawson's right next January as he pounds the gavel at the first historic meeting of the Expenditures Committee.

Dewey Was Right

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan was one of Truman's best assets in defeating Dewey. But regarding at least one campaign criticism it now develops that Brannan heartily agrees with Dewey.

This pertains to the Tennessee Valley Authority and soil conservation. Dewey claimed that TVA did a miserable job on soil conservation. And at a discussion group at the Cosmos Club the other evening, Secretary Brannon agreed.

Tennessee is one of only two States in the Union (the other is Pennsylvania) which does not cooperate with the United States Soil Conservation Service. TVA set up its own conservation arrangement with the University of Tennessee, and during the campaign Dewey sent a man to Tennessee to compare TVA's soil conservation with North Carolina's. He reported North Carolina far ahead.

Secretary Brannan went even further than Dewey the other night. Refreshingly frank, in a more-or-less private discussion, he stated flatly that the Department of Agriculture would oppose the establishment of a Missouri Valley Authority unless Valley authorities as typified by TVA right-about faced regarding soil conservation.

Italian Army General Sees President Truman

General Efisio Marras, chief of staff of the Italian army, yesterday paid his respects to President Truman.

Marras told newsmen at the White House: "I was very proud to be presented to him. It was a visit of courtesy to pay my respects."

He was accompanied by Col. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle of the American Army, who said that Marras would go to Detroit today to visit the tank arsenal there.
